Supreme Court Says Port of Bayocean Was Illegally Organized.

There being no machinery provided by which the county court can investigate the legality of the votes cast at a port election, it is perhaps competent for citizens whose property is included within a proposed port to question the legality of the vote by which it is claimed to have been established by a proceeding in the circuit court. However, it is not necessary to pass upon this question in the present case, but the frequent practice of persons acting as witnesses to the residence of non-registered voters upon a mere introduction or statement by other persons, and without actual personal knowledge of such residence and actual personal acquaintance with the proposed voter, is not warranted by law, and, in fact, is a violation thereof.

The judgment of the circuit court is affirmed.
