SWIM CAMPAIGN SCHEDULED HERE BY LOCAL CHAPTER

Summer vacations will be safer for the boys and girls of Roseburg because of the "learn-to-swim-in-safety" campaign to be conducted under the auspices of the local Red Cross chapter from June 29 to July 4. Not only will the young people learn how to take care of themselves in the water, but they will learn what to do for a fellow-swimmer in distress. This announcement was made today by Dr. H. C. Church of the chapter, who is busily at work upon the details of the campaign.

"Once a person learns to swim, he never forgets," said Dr. Church, "but the Red Cross has an excellent idea in not only offering to teach those who do not know how, but to help those who already are fairly good swimmers to learn to handle themselves better and thus some day possibly save a life. Proper training makes every swimmer a potential life-saver. That training the Red Cross is prepared to give to children and adults in Roseburg without charge."

The local chapter is paying the expenses of a qualified instructor, Gene Eberhart, swimming instructor at the University of Oregon, who will be furnished by the Pacific headquarters of the Red Cross in San Francisco. Classes will be held at Umpqua park. A schedule giving exact hours of instruction will be announced later.

"Be at home on the water, in the water and under the water," says the Red Cross. Persons interested in learning more about "swim-in-safety" week may obtain further information from Dr. Church.

Weather Conditions

Unsettled conditons prevail over the central portions of the country, and showers have been general from the northern Rockies to the lake region and in the adjacent provinces. Temperatures are decidedly above normal in the great central valleys, but cooler weather prevails in the Rocky mountain states. Generally fair weather but with some cloudiness is expected in this vicinity tonight and Tuesday; temperature will continue moderate.

POEM FOR THE DAY

By LOUIS ALBERT BANKS

REFLECTIONS ON THE WILBUR ACADEMY BELL

On June 5th the News-Review published a picture of the old bell of Umpqua academy, Wilbur, that for nearly half a century called the students of the old school to the chapel exercise that was a pronounced feature of the school's existence. The bell's tones have rung out through the Umpqua hills for 73 years. It deserves a place in archives of southern Oregon, as it has a place in the minds and hearts of thousands of students who have answered its call.

It will ring again Saturday, June 7, at 10:30 a. m., to call to order the many people from all parts of Douglas county, some from other sections of the state, and, most likely as usual, some from more distant points to celebrate the reunion of the old Umpqua academy's students and their friends.

The pioneer schools of Oregon, more than any other factor, are responsible for the character building of the early Oregon settlers.

They have an honored place in our educational system of the years long passed, and they still live to do honor to their founders—growing in strength and usefulness.

It is hoped that hundreds of the people of Douglas county will assemble at the old academy ground next Saturday and help to make merry as the old acquaintances are renewed and plans considered for the extended service of the associated academy students, who, in the very nature of things, will not long say "good morning" when the old bell rings.—The Roseburg News-Review, June 5, 1930.

We venerate this ancient bell;
What tales of joy its tongue could tell
Of folks who lived so long ago
Before the days of radio!
It seems a sentient, living thing—
It can such virile memories bring.
How oft it rang upon the air
The call to morning chapel prayer!

This bell is now a patriarch;
'Twas in its day high water mark
For culture in this noble state—
For many souls a bell of fate.
Before Corvallis had a name,
And ere Eugene had joined the game,
This dear old bell woke hopes untold
And dreams of faith worth more than gold.

It was a tocsin call to youth
To flee for refuge to the truth;
It was a call for nobler life
To fit the soul for higher strife;
It was a call to boys and girls
To gather wisdom's precious pearls.
Those youths, though years have made them gray,
Remember what this bell would say.

This bell was once a guiding star
To souls who now are scattered far.
To them it has a classic sound.
Though they have wandered earth around.
We hail you, sweet old Wilbur bell;
You've done your work, and done it well!
May we do ours, as sweet and true—
As faithful to our task as you!

FLIER WINS FIGHT FOR LIFE AGAINST FIVE-FOLD ORDEAL

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

MENDOZA, Argentina, June 22.—Succored by a lonely shepherdess, Henri Guillaumet, French mail aviator, endured the hardships of a plane crash, a fall down a precipice, and Andean blizzard, starvation and days without sleep, and lived to tell the tale today.

An airplane brought him here during the night from a mountain village, Pareditas, where he was discovered yesterday by a provincial police official. He had been missing a week, and a widespread search for him would have been abandoned today in the belief that he and plane had been buried in the snows which have fallen in the Andes for days.

A medical examination revealed that the flier was suffering from various injuries, principally severe bruises, incurred when he lost his footing on a mountainside glacier and tumbled 400 feet down a precipice.

Guillaumet set out a week ago yesterday from Santiago de Chile with mail and cargo for Mendoza, Argentine border city. The trip under any circumstances is difficult and dangerous due to the high peaks of the Andes which must be surmounted. On this trip the ship's wings gathered so much snow that it finally made a forced landing on the side of a winter-swept mountain.

The plane turned over and was destroyed, but Guillamaut crawled out of the wreckage unhurt. The blizzard still raged so he spent the night beneath the wings of the plane, remaining awake so as not to freeze to death. Saturday the weather cleared somewhat and he saw an airplane fly high over him. He signaled but apparently his frantic motions were not perceived.

Sunday he started to march through the mountains toward Mendoza, hardly hoping he would ever reach there alive. It was then he slipped on the ice and fell 150 meters down a precipice, losing what provisions he had with him and receiving injuries which made every minute until his rescue one of suffering.

Half starved and afraid to sleep, he marched Tuesday and Wednesday over mountain and through snow-filled valleys, until Thursday he stumbled into the presence of a lonely shepherdess minding her flock on the hill sides not many miles from Pareditas. She dressed his wounds, gave him food and found him a place to sleep.

CHIEFTAIN MINE ORE IS SHIPPED

The first carload of ore for the Chieftain mine near Myrtle Creek was shipped today. It is expected the output of the mine will be about a carload a month at the present rate of operation. The ore in the first shipment, according to estimates made at the mine, is expected to return about $6,000. The mine, under the direction of Law and Ward, has been developed with a view of permitting very extensive operation at a later date, but at present is being worked only by the two owners, and the ore is being trucked to Myrtle Creek. Several carloads of ore are now on the dump to be hauled to the railroad. This mine was once one of the heaviest and richest producers in southern Oregon, but was abandoned when the vein was faulted. Mr. Law, an experienced mining engineer, examined the property and relocated the vein and has constructed a new tunnel with every prospect of having a mine that will become a very profitable producer.
