For Coughs

Never hesitate to ask your doctor about Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It is a regular medicine, a strong medicine, a doctor's medicine.

It would be very interesting to know how many years your family physician has prescribed Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for coughs, colds, and all forms of lung troubles. Ask him the next time you see him. We know physicians who have used it for over half a century. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

EDENBOWER NEWS.

Mrs. C. P. Barnard's father, Henry Verrill, died Oct. 30th at Eugene, and the remains were sent to Minnesota for interment. Mr. Verrill was at one time a resident of Douglas county, living for a time at Dixonville, where he was held in high esteem by all who knew him.

John Munson,, who spent the most of the hot weather in the mountains for the benefit of his health, has returned home. His mother, who accompanied him, has also returned.

Joe Brumbach, Esq., of Dixonville, passed through Edenbower Friday.

Considerable farming is going on, and grain already begins to look fine.

J. A. Hewitt, who believes in diversified farming, is getting ready to put out an acre of Excelsior strawberries.

Persons who have not visited the exhibit building at Roseburg, should stroll down to the depot and see the fine exhibits and note as a matter of pride how many of them are from this vicinity.

Talking of diversified farming, I visited not long since at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Owen. Before leaving I was led to believe that every thing will grow in Oregon. They live on the old M. Lemmer place. The first thing that attracted my attention, after filling my basket with cherries, was the asparagus bed. I should think they had enough to fill the Roseburg market. Then rhubarb or pie-plant with large sprawling leaves that showed high fertilization, not a few plants, but a whole lot of it—to use flowing language—grapes galore, berries, apples, pears, peaches—everything that people tell me this is an off year for, but they had an abundance. Their cherry crop was more than they could handle. Every thing about the Owens ranch showed traces of careful handling. Apples and pears had been thinned symmetrically. People make farming a study here. Every man acts as if he were the head of an agricultural department. Before leaving I had to see Mrs. Owens' flowers. She has a rose garden, not just a few roses, and through advertising in The Review, her carnations have made her famous. She has her greenhouse near the banks of the Umpqua. Talmage says: "Show me the person who loves flowers, and I'll show you a person who will be an up-builder in society." MARGARET.

The General Demand

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

SUCCESS IN SWINE BREEDING.

J. F. Keller, in an article that won a prize in the swine contest conducted by the American Agriculturist, says of hog breeding and management:

As to breeds I may say all have their strong and weak points, and our thirty years' experience in handling 100 to 200 hogs annually convinces me that a better feeding animal is more frequently secured by crossbreeding. This is understood to mean the progeny of pure bred parent stock. The character of the progeny of pure bred parents can be foretold with a marked degree of certainty, but of crossbred parents not at all. The black breeds usually give the highest grade meats with the least offal, but many of them have been bred for heavy points and consequently have lost fecundity. I find relief in this line by using Chester White, Duroc-Jersey or large Yorkshire sows, which I find prolific breeders and excellent mothers. These are bred to a thoroughbred Poland-China boar. A Poland-China boar and Berkshire sow brings a very superior feeder. In crossbreeding it is usually advisable that the sow should be of the larger breed, as this gives freedom of parturition and great suckling ability. The dam should have good length, wide between upper and lower body line, fair width, strong bone, set with straight joints and not less than twelve well developed teats.

A sow to be profitable should be able to produce two good litters annually and bring to weaning in good condition an average of eight pigs to the litter. Where a small herd is kept and warm quarters provided I find the early March litters the most profitable, as they are large enough to get more out of the summer clover pasture, which is the best and cheapest pig feed. The sows may be bred to fall farrow in August or September and the litter get a good start before winter sets in. To carry very small pigs over winter is seldom profitable. Where several hundred pigs are to be handled the farrowing should be deferred till the latter part of April or first of May unless the most perfect housing and artificial warmth are provided. Even then, on account of lack of exercise for the little pigs, the fatality is considerable. I breed at one time as near as I can and even up the small litters with the surplus of the large ones.

The parent stock should be in fair flesh and good health at time of mating to insure strong, healthy litters. The dam should have exercise during the period of gestation—this is very important—and she should be in good flesh at farrowing, as she will endure the drain on her system better during the suckling period and carry the litter to weaning in better shape. Her winter feed had best be of a tissue forming, laxative nature. Mill feeds, roots field peas, soy beans, clover leaves, with an occasional dash of corn, are excellent. Bear in mind that the sow must be well fed during the period of gestation to secure best results.

The sow should be placed in her farrowing quarters a few days previous to this event, so she will become acquainted with her surroundings. She should be fed sparingly on scalded bran slops at this time to cool out and regulate the system and after farrowing should be given only tepid water or a very thin gruel for the first twenty-four hours. Overfeeding at this critical period is fatal to the litter by seriously deranging the system of the sow. Add to the feed gradually till on full feed in ten or twelve days. If the sow is very restless at time of farrowing, remove the pigs carefully as they appear and return as soon as farrowing ceases. In most cases it is better to leave the sow entirely alone, and in case of extreme cold weather provide sufficient bedding so she may burrow in it and her bodily heat prevent chilling of the litter.

The pigs will show a disposition to eat at three weeks old and should be encouraged to do so by providing a creep where shelled corn and sweet milk are to be had. By the time they are eight weeks old they should be on full feed and weaning take place without check to thrift or growth. Never give the dam during the suckling period sour or stale feed. This will derange the systems of the litter, causing dissentery and stunted growth.

Facts About Goats.

Goats do not eat grass as long as there are weeds and brush.

An Angora is a prolific breeder and a productive shearer until twelve or thirteen years old.

An ordinary fence is generally effectual to confine goats. Their tendency, as a rule, is rather to go through a fence than to jump over.

How to Cure a Cold.

Be as careful as you can you will occasionally take cold, and when you do, get a medicine of known reliability, one that has an established reputation, one that is certain to effect a quick cure. Such a medicine is Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It has gained a world wide reputation by its remarkable cures of this most common ailment. It acts on nature's plan, relieves the lungs, aids expectoration, opens the secretions and aids nature in restoring the system to a healthy condition. During the many years in which it has been in general use we have yet to learn of a single case of cold or attack of the grip having resulted in pneumonia when this remedy was used, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous disease. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy contains no opium or other narcotic and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by Hamilton Drug Co.

G. B. Burhans Testifies After 4 Years

G. B. Burhans, of Carlisle Center, N. Y., writes: "About four years ago I wrote you stating that I had been entirely cured of a severe kidney trouble by taking less than two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure. It entirely stopped the brick dust sediment, and pain and symptoms of kidney disease disappeared. I am glad to say that I have never had a return of any of those symptoms during the four years that have elapsed and I am evidently cured to stay cured, and heartily recommend Foley's Kidney Cure to any one suffering from kidney or bladder trouble."
