READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE

The Tinies eyed the watering can, and away from it they ran. "I do not think," said Coppy, "that we'd better touch that thing. We do not know what is inside." Wee Clowny chimed right in and cried, "Well, I am going to find out. Maybe good luck it will bring."

"Be careful now," another said. "Remember, you're the one who led us way up here to Thunderland. I wish we hadn't come. If you have your way I'll just bet you'll get us into trouble yet. You've often done that very thing by actions that were dumb."

"Ha, ha," laughed Clowny. "You're afraid. But I am brave, and I have made a lot of moves that all the rest of you have plainly feared. Don't worry 'cause I'll see that we are as safe from harm as we can be. What makes you Tinies shake so? Is it just because you're skeered?"

Then Scouty cried, "I'm brave as you, and now, whatever you may do I'll very gladly help you. Let's get started right away. No coward will I ever be, 'cause I'm a Boy Scouty. Yes siree! I'm always brave, no matter if it's in my work or play."

Then, suddenly, wee Clowny ran up to the towering water can. "You see!" he cried. "It's safe and sound. I knew that I was right. I'm going to tip the thing about and see if something nice pours out. If it holds milk or honey, won't that be a pleasing sight."

But when he tipped it not a thing but water came. 'Twas like a spring. Then Carpy cried, "Oh, I know what that great big can is for. It makes the rain fall down on earth. Let's make it rain for all it's worth. As long as it holds water, we can pour and pour and pour."
