Be sure to be there and enjoy the new music. Prof. T. H. THE TINYMITES

STORY by HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES by KNICK

READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE

The Thunder Man laughed long and loud. Then to the Tinymites he bowed. "I'll grant your kind request," said he, "and beat my drum no more. That way you all showed deep distress proves that I've showed you all, I guess, the way I use my monstrous drum to make the thunder roar."

"You surely have," one Tiny snapped. "Upon my ears my hands are cupped, but I could hear you just the same. The noise near drove me mad. Now, if you'll stop, and stop for keeps, I know we all will thank you heaps. We all feel good at present, but you'll have us feeling bad."

So rapidly he put his drum right out of sight, and shouted, "Come! I have some other things that you will all be glad to view. Just jump from cloud to cloud, but see that you're as careful as can be. If you watch where you're going, you'll be safe. It's up to you."

For quite a ways they trudged along; "Oh, gee, this air makes one feel strong," cried Chowny. "I am sure that I could work to beat the band. But there is no work to be done. We're just up here to have some fun. The little clouds look here and there and make it hard to stand."

All of a sudden it felt cold, and then the Tinymites were told that Mister Thunder Man was going to make some hail stones drop. The Thunder Man said, "Watch me, now, and I will shortly show you how I turn them loose a little while, then quickly make them stop."

He swung a bushel basket high, and hailstones flew out into the sky. Of course they tumbled down to earth. The hailstorm was begun. The Tinies watched in keen delight. It surely made a pretty sight. The basket soon was empty and the hailstorm then was done.
