PIRATES, WITH 2 GAME LEAD, MOVE AGAINST GIANTS

BY WILLIAM J. CHIPMAN
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

With the National league race threatening momentarily to become a strictly private affair between the Pirates and the Cubs, John McGraw deployed his forces upon the polo grounds front this morning in an attempt to stem the Corsair rush. The invading series may be called crucial for the Giants alone; to the jaunty Buccaneers it constitutes just four more ball games.

The Giants brushed up yesterday for their do-or-die effort by bowing courteously to the fallen Cardinals, who came to life and accepted the decision by 6 to 1. The Pirates got only an even break at Boston, but nevertheless remained ten notches ahead of the Giants in the important column dealing with games lost. The Cubs profited from the Pirate slip by smothering the Phillies, 16 to 3, and so gaining half a game on the leaders. The Pittsburgh march now is just two games.

Burleigh Grimes lost his second game of the season when the Braves took the first game, 7 to 4, and Buccaneers coming back to take the second 13 to 5.

Brooklyn crowned three Cincinnati pitchers for seventeen hits to win the final game of the series by 10 to 5.

The Athletics dropped another one to the Indians, who won by 5 to 2 behind Walter Miller's six-hit pitching. Young Bill Shores was the victim.

The Mackmen nevertheless remained eight games ahead of the Yankees, who contrived to toss off a four-run lead in the ninth and permit the Tigers to win by 9 to 8 in the tenth. Babe Ruth's twenty-second homer and some smart pitching by Waite Hoyt, up to the final crash, went into the discard.

Sammy Gray gained an even break for the Browns in their series against the Red Sox by pitching five-hit ball yesterday to win by 4 to 0.

The Senators won from the White Sox in the final game of the series at Chicago, by a score of 6 to 2.

SEATTLE BREAKS LOSING STREAK BY DOUBLE VICTORY

(By the Associated Press)

Pacific Coast league twirlers yesterday slapped padlocks on the basehit bins, and as a result the pickings were mighty slim for the league leaders. Seattle's losing streak of nine games ended when the Indians spanked the Mission Reds twice in the day 9 to 7 and 7 to 6. That was the high light of the day's engagements.

Featuring a snappy game at Los Angeles, where the Angels defeated the Oaks 7 to 0, was the first triple steal in Pacific coast records for many a season. And it was pulled off by the southern boys.

Hollywood and Portland broke even in a double header at Portland, but the Ducks were more fortunate to win the first encounter, which was th only one to count in the standings. The Stars won the second 3 to 0 in seven innings. The Ducks won by 7 to 6 in ten innings.

Due to the effective brand of pitching shown by Curt Davis, the Seals downed the Senators 6 to 0 at Recreation park.

OHIO RIVER BOAT RACE WON BY SCANT 10 FEET

CINCINNATI, Ohio, July 17—A rollicking revival of the steamboat races of fifty years ago elected a new champion of the Ohio river last night in the packet Tom Greene, victor over the Betsy Ann by a scant ten feet in a spurt to New Richmond, Ohio, 20 miles up the river.

Tom Greene, 25, of a long line of rivermen, commanded the boat bearing his name. Frederick Way, Jr., 28, was in charge of the Betsy Ann. The Betsy Ann permanently lost a set of golden antlers, emblematic of a former championship of the Mississippi river, and the Tom Greene won a loving cup offered by merchants of New Richmond. The antlers are in the possession of the Greene lines, Cincinnati.

Back in the days when an important race meant a holiday in the valley, river folk turned out for the modern event in the spirit, if not the appearance, of former days. Thousands lined the shores on both sides.

GOOD-NIGHT STORIES
By Max Trell

THE SHADOW-CHILDREN OFFER THE BUTTERFY SOME BUTTER, AND—

"How did butterfly get its name?" Knarf asked one day.

Mij, Flor, Hanid and Yam—the other little shadow-children with the turned-about names—shrugged their shoulders. They shook their heads. Finally they looked inquiringly at each other. The fact of the matter was that they didn't know.

"It must have something to do with butter," said Flor.

"It must have something to do with flying, too," said Mij.

"It must have something—" began Yam.

"Let's look for a butterfly and ask it," broke in Hanid. It seemed like a sensible suggestion, so they all went out into the garden and waited in the sweet-pea patch. By and by, a little yellow butterfly alighted on a stem.

The Butterfly Alighted on the Butter.

"Good morning," said the shadow-children, hurrying over.

"Good morning," replied the butterfly timidly.

"May we ask you a question?" said Hanid.

"Oh," said the butterfly, "I don't know if I can answer it. No one has ever asked me a question before."

"It's only about your name. Why are you called butterfly?"

"I'm afraid," the butterfly said, "that I can't answer. I don't know why I'm called butterfly."

"Didn't your mother ever tell you?" Knarf inquired.

The butterfly sighed. "I never saw my mother. I was only a little egg when she left me. Then I became a caterpillar and ate green leaves. When it began to get cold I spun a cocoon on a twig and went to sleep. When I woke up it was quite warm again. I came out of the cocoon to get something to eat. The moment I stepped out, my jacket burst and I found that I was a butterfly!"

"And then what happened?" Flor asked.

"Then I flew here to look for something to eat."

"Would you like some butter?" said Knarf.

"Butter—?" it said. "What is butter?"

"It's very good," said Knarf.

"Especially on bread," added Mij. "—and with cheese," said Hanid.

"—and with—" began Yam.

"I never saw butter," put in the butterfly.

"You never saw butter!" exclaimed Flor. "How can you be a butterfly without ever having seen butter?"

The butterfly hung its head in shame. "No one ever showed me any," it said.

At this Knarf cried: "I'll show you some! Just follow me!" And he ran behind the house and sprang in through the kitchen window. The butterfly and the other shadows came directly after him. He pointed to the table.

"There's a dish full of butter," he said.

The butterfly gazed at it in admiration. "It looks so nice and creamy," it said. "Does it taste as good as it looks?"

"It tastes better!" they assured her. "Just try a little."

"Will anything happen if I do?"

"Oh no—nothing at all."

At this it fluttered onto the butter. No sooner did it do so than it found that it was caught fast. The more it struggled to get away, the faster it stuck.

"Help! Help!" it cried.

Just then in walked Inda, the housemaid, and seeing the butterfly in the butter, she uttered an exclamation of dismay. The poor butterfly stood stiff with fright. Then Inda dashed over and taking its wings between her thumb and forefinger, plucked it out of the butter and dropped it out of the window. Without a word it flew off.

Mij, Flor, Hanid and Knarf were very silent. But Yam, finding a chance to speak at last, said: "It must be called butterfly because it flies from butter."
