Today's Pattern

Make Her School or Party Frock In Youthful Princess Style
PATTERN 2637

by Anne Adams

Every "would-be" princess—aged four to twelve — is sure to want this dream of a young frock — youthfully lovely, and cut on simple, princess lines. Her mother's sure to see the double-duty possibilities in just such a pattern, for in challis or cotton print the belted version's ideal for school or playtime. Without a belt, it's a wee bit dressier, so make it up in dimity, or washable printed crepe for Sunday best or parties. Mother will find it whips into shape very quickly for front and back panels will fall straight and unbroken from young shoulders, are so easy to cut. Panties are included with this frock (to make it just that much more wearable—and smart).

Pattern 2637 is available in sizes 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12. Size 6 takes 2¼ yards 36 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions include.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Send for OUR SPRING PATTERN BOOK! It's a thrifty guide to clothes with the new 1936 look. Easy-to-make designs for matrons, misses and children, for daytime and evening, work and play. Newspaper Advertising Leads in Public Confidence, Nation-Wide Inquiry Reveals

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Editor)

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—(AP)—A high degree of confidence that newspaper advertising is reliable, found in a wide cross-section of the American public, was reported today by Charles C. Stech in an advertising research study.

More than 5,000 persons from coast to coast were asked 15 questions about newspaper advertising by a corps of young women. The questions were put to oil field workers, professors, radio announcers, physicians, housewives, lawyers, bartenders, beauty shop operators and many other categories.

The survey covered 21 states and 122 occupations.

"To the question," Stech reports, "'which do you usually consider more reliable, statements given out by men elected to public office or advertisements in your daily newspapers?' 85 per cent favor newspaper advertisements.

"Answering the question, 'which do you usually consider more reliable, claims and statements made by salesmen or advertisements in your daily newspaper?' 88 per cent declared for newspaper advertising. Even the majority of salesmen questioned agreed that newspaper advertising was apt to be more reliable and dependable than the average salesmen.

"Eighty per cent of those questioned asserted that in their opinion advertisements made by daily newspapers more interesting.

"Eighty-four per cent said they get helpful ideas from newspaper advertising.

"To the question, 'are you misled in your beliefs and purchases by the advertisements in your daily newspapers?' 59 per cent said no, 11 per cent said 'rarely,' 26 per cent said 'occasionally' and four per cent answered 'frequently.' These results would indicate that the experiences of the average consumer show a substantial confidence in newspaper advertising.

"In answer to the question, 'do you feel that a concern which spends money to advertise its brand is more likely to keep its product always up to standard than a concern which does not spend money to advertise its product?' 85 per cent said yes, which indicates one reason for the popularity of advertised brands."

CCC Development as Education Gap Between College and School Foreseen

CHICAGO, Jan. 8 — (AP) —A sociologist looked today at one unchallenged item of the new deal — the civilian conservation corps — and saw in it the outlines of a new type of public school.

Amid the wreckage of the AAA and the NRA, Prof. Arthur J. Todd of Northwestern university visioned the CCC as a lasting monument to the social philosophy of the Roosevelt administration.

The professor, in an interview, predicted development of the CCC unit as a flexible educational agency to fill the gap between high school and college.

He called upon educators to "hammer out promptly such a modification" of the CCC camps "as will adapt itself to the long range educational and social needs of the rapidly swelling army of unassimilated youth."

The curriculum, he said, should be a balanced combination of manual labor and study, the "schools" should be set up in cities as well as rural areas, and "students" should include girls as well as boys.

Some new instrument of education must be set up to care for "some 5,000,000 boys and girls between the ages of 16 and 25 who are neither going on for higher education nor yet absorbed into industry," he asserted.

He suggested the CCC "schools" could accomplish "enormous jobs of public improvement," such as public works, slum clearance, social work, "which should not unfairly compete with private business."

He advocated that jobless young men and women be enrolled regardless of whether their families were on relief, and that the period of service be lengthened to prevent young people from slipping back into their old unsatisfactory environment.

REBROADCASTING SOURCE LOCATED

One of the principal sources of rebroadcasting of signals from Radio Station KRNR was located last night by the station's engineers, who expect to eliminate this particular source of trouble during the next few days. The engineers worked all night in making corrections which greatly improved the rebroadcasting situation today, and further work to be done this week is expected to give still better results.

It was discovered that much of the rebroadcasting came from the heating system of the Umpqua hotel, in which the station is located, and grounding of the system last night was found very effective in removing much of the trouble which has resulted in complaints from some listeners of being able to hear the station at various points on the dial.

Since the station was put in operation, the engineers have been giving much time to the elimination of various sources of rebroadcasting, and have grounded cornices, metal fire escapes and other such devices.

Discovery of the rebroadcasting effect of the hotel heating system has disposed of one of the principal offenders and when the work is completed it is believed that the task of locating other sources of trouble will be greatly simplified.

The KRNR engineers are giving all possible time to the work of locating and eliminating all possible rebroadcast sources.

PURCHASERS PREFER SMALLER TURKEYS

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 9.—(AP)—Better than seasonal demand for turkeys kept quotations today at 22 to 23c for hens and 21 to 22c for toms, the Northwest Poultry & Dairy Products reported.

New York buyers want small toms and hens weighing below 18 lbs., but most birds go over that weight.

An "anti-treating" ordinance was adopted by the Tacoma, Wash., city council, making the buying of an intoxicating drink for another person a misdemeanor.
