GEORGE QUINE SEEKS OFFICE

Announces Himself as Candidate For County Judge at Coming Election.

STATEMENT IS MADE

Appeals to Voters of County, Setting Forth Record of Past Eleven Months Since He Was Appointed to Office.

County Judge George K. Quine has announced his candidacy for the office which he now holds. Judge Quine was appointed to this position following the retirement of Judge D. J. Stewart, who was forced to resign because of ill health. Formerly Mr. Quine held the office of sheriff for a long term of years. He is now seeking election to the office which he now holds and in announcing his candidacy makes the following statement to the voters of Douglas county:

Statement.

"Having occupied the office of county judge approximately eleven months, during which time we have launched a gigantic road program, the construction of which is just beginning, and realizing the great responsibility placed upon the county court by the voters of this county in directing the expenditure of not only the $1,100,000 bond issue, but the balance of the previous bond issue unexpended, together with the special taxes, market road fund, and other funds derived from various sources for expenditure in the construction of good roads, I am announcing my candidacy for election to the office of county judge, and in asking the voters for their support, I am not unmindful of the fact that I am asking for a great trust to be placed in me, but I submit that my ten years' experience as sheriff and tax collector of Douglas county has brought me in contact with every portion of the county, which experience has been of considerable value to me since I have been acting as your county judge.

"No one can hold the office of sheriff for any length of time without incurring the enmity of some persons, and it would be useless for me to say that I have no enemies within the county, but regardless of that fact, I am asking for your support upon the record made by the county court during the short time I, together with my associates, have had an opportunity to direct the conduct of the affairs of the county. Briefly, with your permission, I will state that we have the following main highways now under construction, to-wit: The Roseburg-Camas Valley-Myrtle Point highway, provision having been made for the completion of the entire road. The road leading from Roseburg and Drain to Reedsport and Gardiner, via Elkton and Scottsburg, is now under construction, and we hope to get cooperation from the government to complete the entire project within the coming year. The Loon Lake-Mill creek-Umpqua road is also in process of construction, and we have had favorable consideration from the forestry department, and hope that our funds will be matched to complete this highway, which will afford to a rich portion of our county a means of transportation to the markets within our own county. The market roads running east and west from Yoncalla are provided for, and contracts are now being let. The same is true of the roads leading into Oakland, as well as Sutherlin and Wilbur. On the North Umpqua road we hope to be able to construct a bridge at Lone Rock ferry at a nominal cost, by removing several steel bridges which are to be replaced by concrete bridges on the Pacific highway, and we also hope to not only improve the highway from Roseburg to Rock creek, but an additional nine miles from Rock creek to the forest boundary. The roads from Roseburg west are all under consideration now, as well as the roads at Glendale, Myrtle Creek, Riddle, and up the South Umpqua river.

"This is only a brief statement of the projects we have in mind, the money for which was provided by the bond issue recently adopted. We hope to sell these bonds as they are needed, thereby saving the interest upon them as long as possible, and the money to be derived therefrom is to be expended according to the original intent of the voters—that is to say, every dollar to be placed where it was voted to be expended. This work is to be done by contract, or if the bids are not satisfactory, we will proceed to do it by force account, thus getting the best possible results from the money available for this purpose.

"I have endeavored during my term of office to conduct the affairs thereof economically, and when there has been suggestion or criticism from the Taxpayers League or other sources, we have always endeavored to take advantage of the experience and good business judgment of those who have brought matters to our attention, and tried to co-operate with all persons concerned in the proper conduct of county affairs.

"You will appreciate that the office of county judge is an important one, and I do not wish it understood that I am the only person fitted to fill the same. I realize more every day the importance and magnitude of this position, but I have tried to conduct affairs in a business like manner and as economically as consistent with the best interests of the county. I am not alone in this, but my associates have co-operated with me fully, and if you see fit to return me to this office I assure you that the policy outlined will be carried out and every promise made to the people during the campaign for road bonds will be performed and every pledge kept.

"Much money can be saved the county in the purchase of materials and machinery for road construction. This policy we have endeavored to install and have had some results therefrom. I can only invite you to investigate the records of this county, and if you think, from an inspection thereof, that I am entitled to your support at the coming primary election, to carry out the policies that have been established, I respectfully solicit that support, and if I am nominated and elected, I will endeavor to give you the best service that there is in me, which is all anyone can do."

Walter Fisher, the detectative, in The Four Liars, Antlers, Mar. 15-16.

THAT MORNING LAMENESS

If you are lame every morning, and suffer urinary ills, there must be a cause. Often it's weak kidneys. To strengthen the weakened kidneys and avert more serious troubles, use Doan's Kidney Pills. You can rely on Roseburg testimony. Ask your neighbor!

F. Hite, 813 Short St., Roseburg, says: "My kidneys troubled me for a long time and I was almost down with my back. I could hardly get out of bed mornings and when I stooped dizzy spells came over me and black spots floated before my eyes. My kidneys acted irregularly and I was in a bad fix when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills but they soon rid me of the aches and pains and made my back well and strong."

AN INVITATION TO LUNCH

The apartment Angela took me to was a little dream. I engaged it on the spot. I could not get away from work to pack my things, so I had to accept Angela offer to help. Jack insisted on being assistant manager of the enterprise and so it was agreed.

When I left for the studio the next morning, Angela said: "Come to your new apartment tonight, Virgie, and you will find dinner awaiting you."

"Why is it that everyone is so nice to me?" I asked, as I kissed her good-bye.

"Most people are nice in this world if you give them a chance," she answered. "You always seem to expect kindness and you get it."

At the studio I found that Theo was not on the set. The director was to take the sequence in which the juvenile and I were telling the story that Maud Sanson had told Theo to make him jealous. The young man was a very good actor and said to be one of the coming screen idols.

Under other circumstances I would have been very interested in my vis-a-vis. But even as it was I evidently did my part well, for the director was satisfied with the one rehearsal.

The boy and I were going through a love scene on the same garden seat on which Theo had told me he loved me, when Theo came on the lot. I went all to pieces. I knew it was silly of me, but I couldn't help it.

"Here, here," shouted the director. "Put more life in this."

I spurred my lagging spirits, determined not to look upon Theo's frowning face.

As soon as the scene had been taken, Theo came over to me.

"Were you acting, Baby-child? Were you acting with me, or were you acting in this scene?"

"But Theo, you gave me the part."

"Yes, but I did not know how I would feel about it. I did not know how much I loved you until I saw that chap, years younger than I am, take you in his arms. Then, Virgie, I knew how devotedly I love you."

Right there on the set Theo almost put out his arms to me. Had he done so I would have gone straight into them. Theo realized this and that we were going too far. Turning quickly on his heel, he spoke to the director:

"How much longer will it take for this sequence?"

"I think we can finish this afternoon, Stratton. It is the story that Maud Sanson is telling you. We would like to start on location tomorrow night. We have had hard work in getting the right kind of a yacht. But I guess it is all fixed now. I have ordered tickets for The Lark tomorrow night to take us to San Francisco."

Theo, his conversation with the director finished, turned back to me.

"I am not going to stay, Virgie. It isn't necessary and I can't bear to see you go through these scenes. Tomorrow night we are starting for San Francisco. And, oh Virgie, thank God that I will have you then all to myself. At least that juvenile won't be there."

"Then you are going to let me drown, Theo," I smiled at him. (In the script the juvenile was to save me.)

"I have cut that out. I am going to save you myself."

"Can you swim?"

"Don't flirt with me, Virgie. I am too serious. For the first time in my life I am really in earnest and I want you to be just as serious as I. I want you to feel that nothing matters in all this world but just our love—just as I do."

Theo's words made me happy all the rest of the day and even when I arrived at my new apartment and found Angela and Jack with a splendid dinner all ready, I was not able to talk much except to tell them how sweet they were to me. Every moment I was thinking of those blessed days to come in San Francisco when Theo would be showing me about the city. I had never been in San Francisco.

My two good friends thought, from my silence, that I was still grieving for Kitty and they respected my reticence. And, although I was a little ashamed of it, I was glad when they left me with my own thoughts for the night.

Until noon the next day I was busy with additional love scenes with the juvenile, who was heart-broken because he was not going with us to San Francisco on location.

"I can't figure out why Stratton cut down my part," he wailed. "Everything I was to do on location he has hogged," he added wrathfully, I smiled in my sleeve.

"Are you lunching at the cafe?" I heard a suave voice at my side. I turned and saw Mrs. Chester, a woman who was playing the part of my mother, and who had never spoken to me before except when the action made it necessary.

"Yes, Mrs. Chester," I answered in surprise.

"Come and lunch with me," she invited, and wonderingly I agreed.

"What can she have to say to me?" was my thought, for I knew that Mrs. Chester, a very reserved woman, did not ask me to luncheon merely for my company.

GARETH HUGHES IS CALLED THE SUPREME EGOTIST

Gareth Hughes, at the Liberty tonight in "The Hunch," has been called the supreme egotist, but it has also been said of him that he has vindicated this by his artistry. He has been on the stage, abroad and here, since early childhood. Mrs. Fiske saw in Gareth Hughes' performance the re-awakening of genius upon the stage.

"OVER THE HILL" HERE

"Over the Hill," the wonder picture of Broadway, that has easily outdistanced every other screen presentation in the matter of a continuous run in New York, will be seen here at the Antlers theatre tonight, Thursday and Friday.

"Over the Hill" is an unusual picture. It does not depend upon the eternal triangle for its sustained interest. Nor require mob scenes to bolster up shortcomings in plot. There is something so sweet and wholesome and interesting in the story that the blase New Yorker, so particular and discriminating in his choice of theatrical entertainment, has seen fit to give it his steady patronage and unqualified enthusiasm ever since it was first shown there in September, 1920.

Paul H. Sloan adapted the story from Will Carleton's "Farm Ballads" and Harry Millarde directed it. William Fox, its producer, has supplied a corps of singularly competent players.

EXPERIENCE NECESSARY

Running a ranch is like running any large business, says Buck Jones, the William Fox motion picture star. You can't buy a ranch and expect to make it pay is you have never run one before. Buck ought to know. He runs a ranch in his latest picture, "Bar Nothin'," now playing at the Majestic theatre.

Child Singer Will Feature Picture

Little Georgia McCune, the child actress who delighted the audiences of the Antlers theatre with her singing and dancing Saturday and Sunday nights, will be at the Antlers Wednesday, Thursday and Friday also, and will sing during the showing of the special feature picture, "Over the Hill." Little Miss McCune has an extraordinary voice for a six year-old child, is a graceful dancer, and knows the difficult art of yodeling to perfection. She has been on the Pantages circuit in vaudeville, and gives a most entertaining act. She will sing during the picture, featuring several of the most pathetic scenes.

GRIPPING PICTURE AT LIBERTY

Manager Hofer of the Liberty theatre, announces with pleasure the coming attraction "The Light in the Clearing," which will play at that house Thursday and Friday. It is a Hobart Bosworth picture from Irving Bacheller's story, adapted to the screen by T. Hayes Hunter. It is a living throbbing portrayal of human life, rose with stirring situations. Eugene Bresson, as Hoving Kate, gives a portrayal of a vanish and defeated hopes that never fails to stir the hearts of any audience.
