BARBARA'S BABY TO BE DANISH CITIZEN

LONDON, Feb. 25 — (AP) — Count Court Haugwitz-Reventlow said today that his wife, the former Barbara Hutton, and their son, born yesterday, were both "going on very well indeed," and that the child is to be regarded as a citizen of Denmark.

He denied British newspaper claims that the tiny count, heir presumptive to a Danish title and to the Woolworth millions, would be British.

Actually, the baby is both Danish and British until he reaches the age of 22, according to a Danish consulate official who said he could reserve Danish nationality for himself either by a visit to Denmark before he attains that age or by a personal application to the king of Denmark — which it is not customary to refuse — afterward.

Borah Again Listens to Presidential Call After Thirty Years of Independent Service

By KIRKE SIMPSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wherever men talk of possibilities for the republican nomination, he who could have been vice president is never ignored.

He is Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, rounding out as dean of the senate 30 unbroken and spectacularly independent years of service.

Down those tramping decades Borah has heard his name called again and again for highest party honors, only to have the call die away against the strangely irregular pattern of his party regularity. At 71, when most men in public life see their careers closing, he hears that call again—louder, more insistent than ever before.

For the first time he has assented to use of his name in party primaries outside his own state—has said, even, that he expects to be the presidential nominee. Yet there is no more certainty among his party colleagues that he is actually seeking a nomination than there is as to Herbert Hoover's real intent.

A Sturdy Figure

These two are mystery figures. They were closely allied in 1928, with Borah in a vital president-maker role behind Hoover's candidacy; far apart in 1932, with Borah, aloof and silent, contributing perhaps to Hoover's defeat.

Borah, at 71, is a sturdy, ample figure, with seamed and craggy countenance, and disorderly shock of hair that largely defies time's whitening and thinning touch. In senate debate he remains impressive with his virility in thought and speech.

Whether he is named for president or not, he has marched already to fame and influence in the nation, to a place of his own in world affairs.

And it is a strangely lonely way down which he has come, a way of his own choosing. He has been at his best alone, sometimes an irreconcilable rebel against the accepted doctrines of his party; again its ablest campaigner; still again standing in silent, lowering disapproval of party choice or action — but never going to the final point of party desertion.

Backed Theodore Roosevelt

So he stood in 1912, a vigorous fighter for the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt against President Taft. But when the break came he did not follow Roosevelt into the progressive third party movement.

When President Coolidge was to be nominated, at another Cleveland convention, in 1924, and a democratic party torn by internal strife made republican victory certain, Borah was the Coolidge choice for running mate.

He scorned the honor, would make no permanent peace with party leadership or policies he disapproved.

In spite of this, he was a Coolidge supporter. He would have been vice president, perhaps president long ago, but for that choice.

Now Borah again has raised the anti-monopoly standard that the progressives under Roosevelt flaunted in 1912—and under which Borah did not march with them. He demands republican party liberalization in the 1912 Roosevelt-progressive mold. His candidacy, whatever else it may mean, represents that determination primarily.

SAFETY BROADCAST DATE CHANGED

Due to a change of broadcast dates, the many followers of the new radio drama "Death Rides the Highways" who do not want to miss any of the programs will be dialing their favorite NBC Red Network station on Friday nights instead of Saturdays, although the hour will remain the same: 7:30 to 8 Pacific coast time and 8:30 to 9 Mountain time. The first Friday program will be broadcast on February 28.

In its two-fold role, "Death Rides the Highway" not only provides dramatic radio entertainment for hundreds of thousands of radio listeners, but also is a mighty factor in the great nation-wide safety campaign.

The city council of Bellingham, Wash., is considering an ordinance providing blind people carry white canes for identification and protection from motor traffic.

SLIDE KILLS THREE, DEMOLISHES MILL

OURAY, Colo., Feb. 25.—(AP)—Survivors of Colorado's second avalanche tragedy in eight days dug into a mountain of debris at the bottom of a bowl-shaped canyon above here today, lokoing for bodies of two of the three persons killed. The third was recovered. At least four others were injured.

Breaking loose from the craggy peaks rimming the canyon, the heavy snow, estimated to have lain as deep as 18 feet, skidded down the "Chicago slide" yesterday, swept through the lower floor of a two-story bunkhouse, wiped out the $100,000 mill and a snow tunnel connecting the buildings, and came to rest a half-mile farther down.

On February 16, the Hesperus gold mine, 50 miles south of here in similar rugged country, was the scene of an avalanche which killed six when it, too, smashed through a mill and several other buildings.

2nd Slide Occurs.

A second slide yesterday narrowly missed carrying certain death to nearly a dozen others in the bunkhouse when, roaring down an adjoining slope at the same time as the one on the "Chicago slide," it joined the other about 20 feet below the building.

The combined slides, mixed with rock and battered timbers, piled up against the mine entrance in a mass more than 250 feet high, temporarily blocking the exit of 25 miners on the lower level. The miners gained freedom a few hours later from the upper level, however, and reported no hardships.

MANCOS, Colo., Feb. 25.—(AP)—While attention centered today on another avalanche disaster 50 miles to the north, searchers at the Hesperus gold mine, in the rugged country above Timberline near here, continued to probe into a big snowbank which encased the bodies of five men swept to their death in a snowslide nine days ago.

Only a few men remained at the Hesperus, staying behind after a sheriff's party had pushed in after several unsuccessful efforts and then returned with the body of Mrs. Janie Rees, the sixth victim.

Ill at Home—Mrs. A. J. Ford is reported to be ill at her home in this city.
