ankee Tourists Fleeced By Clever French Clerks In Paris Ticket Agencies

y HERBERT M. DAVIDSON, ternational News Service Staff Correspondent.

ARIS, Aug. 17.— While much is made of attempts to fleece the rican tourists in Bavaria, Paris ches of tourist agencies of estab- d reputation are collecting from ion Play pilgrims more than times the price charged at Ober- ergau.

t only do these agencies charge redulous tourist what they like, hey inform him that all or near- l Passion Play tickets and ac- modations in the village are in hands and that the tourist will mpelled to accept the "courtesy" agency service or miss the Pas- Play.

tourist, naturally enough, does ake a chance and go unprepared berammergau. He makes his ar- ments at Paris. He pays what ked.

rists who have told their story e International News service unanimity in their experiences. flagrant case is that of a young n who, after standing in line at Paris office of a tourist agency early half an hour, deigned to he clerk how he figured her de- on Passion Play ticket and ac- modations reservation at forty- francs, when the total marked e ticket was 400 German marks. knew that 100 marks that day worth just about two and one- francs on the Paris Bourse.

h, that's the way we figure it!" all the satisfaction she got, as erk turned to the next customer. e girl went home and examined eceipt. On the reverse side was tatement:

his receipt is issued by Messrs. as Cook & Sons as agents of Oberammergau committee, and doing all in their power to se- the best houses in the district can accept no responsibility. The revenue for accommodations gs entirely to the villagers. rs. Thomas Cook & Sons' only neration being the small book- ees charged to cover their ex- s."

rther examination of the face of the receipt showed that the ing fee" had been charged— English shillings. That was the equivalent of ten francs. The amount the clerk had charged her was still more than twice that accounted for.

She went to see the manager of the Paris office. He turned the receipt over and over in his hand.

"You see, it's this way," he said, "The truth is——"

Looking out of the window at the Madeleine seemed to offer him little inspiration, according to the young woman's account.

"When the founder of this house was a young man," explained the manager, "he went to Oberammergau. It may have been 50 years ago —perhaps it was 60. I mean, of course, the original Mr. Cook, not one of the 'and sons.'

"Mr. Cook, as I say, went to Oberammergau. He saw the Passion Play. He was much affected by its quaintness, its charm, its simplicity. He sent orders to all agencies henceforth that service to Oberammergau was to be given without extra charge for booking——"

The girl pointed to her receipt."But it says here 'booking fee,'" she protested.

"There Are Expenses."

The manager sighed. "There are expenses," he said with a sweep of his hand —"there are expenses."

"What expenses?"

"Well — telegrams."

"There is——" gulped the manager. "There is — the booking fee."

Young Miss American gave it up and left.

"And I don't even know whether I really have a room at Oberammergau and a seat at the play!" she exclaimed afterward, pointing to the "remarks" on the rear of her ticket. "They take no responsibility, only four times the German price. This just goes to show that it doesn't pay to be an inexperienced traveler. If this talk of marks, francs and shillings confused me as much as it does most American tourists I'd never know the difference and probably be just as well satisfied.

"Meanwhile, when I come back from Oberammergau I think I'll start a tourist agency."

Celibacy of Clergy Gets Disapproval From Famous English Woman Preacher

By David M. Church,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—"Sex is a tremendous force, and chastity won means power controlled and directed—power, that is, at command," declares Miss Maude Royden, England's famous woman preacher, discussing the celibacy of the clergy. "But such chastity is as much required of married as unmarried people."

Reports from Rome that there have been petitions made to the Vatican to relieve priests of the inhibition of celibacy have aroused discussions in London as to the value of celibacy for the clergy.

"No doubt it is the feeling that a real priest must care for us all, good and bad, that has persuaded some churches to demand a celibate priesthood," said Miss Royden. "It seems impossible, in a sense it is impossible, for a man to have so great a passion for souls—all souls—as a priest requires if he has already given so paramount a claim upon his life as is given in marriage to one.

Celibacy Explained.

"There is a strong case to be made out for a celibate priesthood One can, I think, easily understand why Christ, the Supreme Priest, did not marry. No one will suggest that it was because He disposed love or lacked virility. It was because the claim of all humanity on Him was too great.

"There is a strong case for a celibate priesthood. Yet I believe we of the Church of England have done well to reject it.

"No one can refuse to admire a Father Damien, who devotes his life once for all to a work of mercy which puts marriage out of the question.

"But we can also admire the man who takes up the responsibilities of marriage and fatherhood and yet serves his people, too. His task may be less difficult, or it may be more difficult. His service is different in character.

"Modern psychologists are teaching us how futile and disasterous it is to try to 'enforce' a state of mind. The mere words sound ridiculous, but, rightly understood, psychologists do not abandon the idea of self-control—they enlighten and educate it. They show us how to manage ourselves and develope our powers. They show how fatal it is to try to destroy or repress them.

Teach Understanding.

"They are already making clear to us why some of the greatest among men have been able to transmute the creative power of sex into a great passion for all humanity. They enable us to understand why such a celibacy as that never strikes one as ascetic or cruel or barren.

"They may even teach some to whom the more normal life, with its satisfaction of the instincts of sex, is denied, how to achieve a rich and full and creative life. There are, perhaps, more to whom celibacy is both possible and desirable than at present we realize.

"But I believe that psychologists will also convince us of the folly of trying to force such an ideal upon those who reject it. It is conceivable that a church may uphold the celibacy of the clergy as its ideal. It will surely no longer enforce it as a law."

In compliance with the recommendations of the state fire marshal and the city fire department, the school board has purchased 15 2½-gallon chemical fire extinguishers which will be distributed to the school buildings of the city.

The extinguishers are of the most modern type, using a soda and sulphuric acid solution. They are easily and quickly operated, and prove effective for indoor fires. In addition, a large size Pyrene extinguisher for use in the chemical laboratory was obtained. These will be placed conveniently in the school buildings, and the teachers and older pupils will be instructed regarding their use. They will be an added protection to the buildings. In addition the board is contemplating the construction of another steel fire escape at the Rose school.
