hat God Says bout—THIRST

"Whoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again."

u can't quench thirst permanently with anything you can get ide of——.

an digs a well for fun and the water gushes pleasure and he and it is delicious; but pleasure satisfies only just so long.

nother fellow digs for social, business or political control, and it and drinks deep, but watch him get thirsty again.

ere's a highbrow digging for knowledge and he gets so much that he has to build libraries in which to store it up like a great but he is thirsty again in no time.

, but look at this big fellow who scorns all such sordid digging he says it's selfish, and forsooth devotes his life to philan-, and when he finds the world ungrateful, as not infrequently he he tries to mix with his philanthropic drink all the generous he hears about his life and work—but the draught soon becomes sweet and he's thirsty.

nd, mind you, most of these men are well-digging, ever and at hard work, boring, stoning-up and tasting only to find the flat and the thirst unquenched. Why not accept what God says nk drinketh of this water shall thirst again." There is nothing that can satisfy the thirst for the eternal.

hat then? Read what God says tomorrow, but if you can't and you ought not—why read—John 4:14 now.

STATE PRESS COMMENTS

HIGH SCHOOL GOLF.

Now comes the information that golf has been taken up by high schools as a regular part of their athletic contests, Los Angeles having a number of high school foursome contenders. An article in the last issue of the esteemed S. E. P. says that over 500,000 people in the United States are now known to be playing golf. That's about 20 per cent of the adult population. Millions of dollars are invested in golf courses and golf, which used to be considered a game for snobs, is doing more to democratize the country than any real special effort in that direction. Games were recently played in New York, for instance, where the finals found a bank president and a hotel porter contending for honors. It is a sport that knows no aristocracy but the aristocracy of skill.—Corvallis Gazette.

NO SILENT NIGHT

Radio broadcasting stations in Chicago recently agreed on an experimental "silent night" during which they would send out no programs, thus allowing fans to listen in on programs of distant cities. It sounds at first like a fair and reasonable suggestion, but it met with many protests.

Said one objector, "Chicago is one of the two cities where the best of talent is obtainable for radio programs. People throughout the Middle West depend on Chicago for their entertainment. To close down one evening a week would be to deprive them of entertainment."

Others protested that many of the radio fans around Chicago had receiving instruments which could not catch the programs broadcast by other cities. A general silent night would be completely silent for them regardless of all that the distant cities might do to enliven the evening.

The suggestion and the protests are an interesting indication of the extent to which radio entertainment has already been developed. Who would have thought a few months ago that the radio habit would have become so fixed that the suggestion of a single night without this form of entertainment in any community would cause a storm of regret and protest?—Albany Democrat.

FULFILLING DESTINY

Announcement of another large cannery for Salem shows that the city is fast realizing her destiny as the canning and packing center of the northwest. In a few more years Salem will rival San Jose as the fruit capital of the far west.

Each cannery added means an additional outlet to the local grower for his products, means a competitive market at home for his berries, fruit and vegetables, means the planting of additional acreage and the employment of more people both on farm and in town, means more payrolls as well as more population—means increased prosperity.

It is only a question of time until the bulk of the canned goods in the world are produced in the Pacific coast states, where climatic conditions and superior quality and quantity of product are so marked as to leave it without competition in the fruit and berry lines. And of the entire coast region no one section has the "edge" on the territory tributary to Salem.—Capital Journal.

ASTORIA CELEBRATES

The people of Astoria celebrated when they received the news that Governor Pierce had signed the bill remitting their state taxes for seven years. Wouldn't any community in Oregon get a little worked up about a piece of good fortune like that?—Eugene Guard.

MANY MEASURES ARE SIGNED BY PIERCE

SALEM, March 3.—A total of 292 bills of the recent legislative session were signed by Governor Pierce and 19 others were stricken down by the executive veto. This out of a total of 614 bills introduced into the two houses, 232 in the senate and 412 in the house of representatives.

The governor completed the arduous task of examining and passing upon the huge grist of bills ground out by the session late Wednesday afternoon, the task occupying his undivided attention almost day and night since the session adjourned and for several days prior to adjournment.

Among the last few bills to receive the executive o. k. was the commercial fishing code—house bill 358—a measure designed to place the fish commission upon a self-sustaining basis through an increase in license and poundage fees.

Other bills signed by the governor late Wednesday include the following:

House bill 251 by Carsner, inaugurating the hunter system of killing coyotes and other predatory animals.

Senate bill 153 by Moser, relating to the powers and duties of coroners.

One additional bill fell under the executive veto at the eleventh hour—house bill 372, a ways and means committee bill, providing for the destruction of rodents. In his veto message the governor declares this task to be a function of the county agent.

REEDSPORT EXPECTS BUILDING BOOM

Many new business and dwelling houses are being planned for early this spring and it is rumored that also an apartment house and new hotel will also be erected here this spring, says the Port Umpqua Courier.

The Winchester Bay Lumber company has completed two of its series of houses which are already being occupied. The company will have a little city all of its own when the houses that they are building are completed.

There are in the neighborhood of five business houses now being factored on and at least 20 residence houses.

The city council has appointed a new fire chief who will issue permits and also inspect the houses as they are being constructed so that every precaution may be taken against the fire hazard.

It is also understood that the city council will enforce the chimney ordinance, prohibiting the use of the chimneys in the fire district. This will be a very good move and will also tend to reduce the insurance rate.

NEW LIGHT PLANT AT REEDSPORT

The Shorey Light and Power company commenced operations with the new light plant here Tuesday evening, running from 6 o'clock in even-Umpqua Courier. The company has given the plant a good trial and will commence running on a 24-hour service Friday, March 3.

On Tuesday evening, about 6 o'clock a faint yellow light showed up which soon became a bright white light and the city was again in light. Many state that they will now be able to come and go around in the night without the aid of a flashlight.

Lights are what we have been crying for for the past two years and at last we have our wish. The Courier has had them on for several months but it was through delays and other mishaps that prevented them from coming on as stated before.
