HEAVY EARRINGS PULL EARS OUT OF SHAPE; HUNG ON HATS

(International News Service.)

LONDON, April 2.—Heavy gypsy earrings of the latest fashion, some of which weigh four ounces each, are, it is claimed by beauty doctors, stretching the ears of the women who wear them and thus spoiling the beauty of the wearers.

In a recently issued statement beauty doctors warn women that the disfigurement will perhaps be permanent, for once any feature of the face has been drawn out of shape it is extremely difficult to restore it to its original form.

Many women, however, are surmounting this objection to the heavy earrings by wearing them suspended from their hats or evening headdresses, where the weight does no damage.

"TUT" HAT IN VOGUE

(International News Service.)

LONDON, April 2.—The Tutankhamen hat has arrived, and many women are wearing them. Some hats, executed in brightly colored raffias, are completely Egyptian in design, and are ornamented with lotus flowers of old Egypt, while many are carried out in fiery yellow, bright blues and soft greens, while for embroidery scarabs and serpents are the most popular.

MUSIC FEATURED AT REVIVAL

The one week revival service at the Christian church continued last night with a fair Monday night audience. The musical program consisted of two very fine numbers by the orchestra, a stirring song service led by Miss Sylvia Gilfilen. A duet by Miss Sylvia Gilfilen and Mrs. Carlson, and the quartett number. This nightly musical program gives great satisfaction to those who are coming to enjoy it. The orchestra will open again tonight and the young ladies will sing at least two special numbers. The pastor preached last night on "The Suffering Messiah," showing that Christ gave up the glories of Heaven, and came to this world, that his visage was marred more than any man. That his sacrifices were great indeed, and then called attention to the ingratitude of man. Tonight the sermon theme, will be, "Heaven's Supreme Effort." This short Easter revival closes next Sunday night, and is proving to be a most completely Egyptian in design, and enjoyable one.

CHAPTERS FROM A WOMAN'S LIFE

By Jane Phelps

CHAPTER 56

"Are you at liberty tonight?" Mrs. Page asked Walter at dinner.

"Yes, Mater, why?"

"Not tired," she asked.

"Not now, cook outdid herself tonight. After such a dinner I should be ashamed to confess I was tired. When I get my smoke I shall feel like a fightingcock."

"Then you'll take me to a lecture?"

I glanced slyly at Walter. He kept his face straight but I saw, by his eyes trying to catch mine; that he was wishing me to help him; that he did not want to go. I refused to understand and he replied:

"All right! I expect I'll go to-sleep unless it is very interesting. I have eaten so heartily."

"I'll forgive you if you do so long as you take me."

I wondered why she didn't ask me to go along. I would be left alone, but she said nothing more, and I wouldn't propose it myself, although I thought it queer she hadn't said anything about it. Jack was asleep, and both Jennie and Mary were to be in all the evening.

Mrs. Page was the kind of woman who took all service given her for granted, as if it were a pleasure to those rendering it. So she smiled placidly at Walter, and told him to get his smoke at once as they would need to leave in half an hour.

"Shall I dress?" Walter asked.

"Certainly!" she replied as she retired to her room, so escaping the sight of the little grimace Walter made at her reply.

But he dutifully dressed, smoking as he did so, and when she came out all dressed even to hat and gloves, he was also ready.

I watched them leave, chatting together, and a feeling of neglect and loneliness gripped me. I asked no questions; did not know where they were going, who was to lecture. Mrs. Page had volunteered no information and I was too proud to ask it.

I got a book and sat down to read. But the house was so still, my thoughts so disturbing, I could not put my mind upon the story, although it was a book I had been anxious to read because Claire Gordon had recommended it highly.

The ringing of the telephone startled me as I jumped. I looked at the clock it was after ten. I must have dropped off to sleep.

A man's voice asked for Walter, and when I said he was not at home, he hung up at once, not giving me time to ask for a message.

Now I was thoroughly awake, and went into the dining room to get a drink of water. The servants had gone to their rooms on the top of the house. Mary, Mrs. Page's maid, was out.

I returned to the sitting room and picked up my book, and soon was engrossed in the story. Suddenly I heard a faint sound, I lifted my head and listened, but it wasn't repeated. I concluded I had been mistaken and went on reading.

There it was again! This time I tiptoed into Jack's room thinking he might be uneasy, awake, but no he was sleeping soundly. My imagination was playing me tricks. I decided as I returned to my seat, but this time I sat listening.

Once more I heard the stealthy sound. This time I was sure it was not my imagination. Someone was in the house, a burglar perhaps.

I thought of all I had heard and read of what to do under such circumstances—to keep quiet and they wouldn't harm one. The telephone was in the hall or I should have attempted to use it. The sitting still, straining to hear, was almost more than I could bear. I wanted to scream.

I had left the sitting room door open, the room was blazing with light but the hall was dark. I could be seen without seeing. I remembered too, that I had left the dining room door open when I went for a drink. It was from there the noise seemed to come.

If only Walter and his mother would come. It certainly must be time for them. I glanced at the clock nearly half past ten, but it had been only a few moments, instead of the hours they seemed, since I had heard the telephone and looked at Jack.

I heard the noise again. A sort of faintness seemed to be creeping over me. I must not faint! Jack and I were alone in the apartment.

Tomorrow—A real burglar in the house.

MOVIES

Government Co-operation in "Milady"

What is said to be a remarkable picture comes to the Liberty Theatre today and tomorrow. It is "Milady," Alexandre Dumas' sequel to his famous "Three Muskteers," produced in France with a wealth of historic detail and a cast of eminent artists of the French stage and screen by Henri Diament-Berger, distinguished director. Students of Dumas will of course recognize in the title of the picture his novel, "Twenty Years After."

When filming "Milady" the director received authorization of the government, never before granted, to use the national chateaux and old streets of historic towns. State apartments in palaces owned by the government were placed at his disposal, together with public and private collections of furniture, tapestries and other antiques, the contents of one scene alone being insured for 300,000 francs. Letters of the Queen of France and of Richelieu were copied from the national archives and the signatures are authentic. The cane actually used by Richelieu in the Seventeenth Century is seen in the hands of Monsieur De Max ,the cardinal in "Milady."

Rich Costumes in Picture

Sixty dressmakers worked a month to prepare the seventeenth century costumes of Betty Compson and the feminine members of the cast of "To Have and To Hold," the Paramount picture at the Antlers Theatre tonight. The costumes of Raymond Hatton as King James; Lucien Littlefield as "Duke of Backingham" and Theodore Kosloff as "Lord Carnal" are eye-filling with their abundance of jewels, satins and laces.

Striking crowds are a feature of production. Several hundred Indians and settlers are used in the Jamestown sequence; several hundred banquetters indulge in an orgy of the 17th century variety; a hundred "doves" or wives for the colonists land at Jamestown—and then, of course, there are the picturesque pirates, one-legged ones, Moors, Spanish, Chinese, representing every kind and variety of villainous looking individuals.

Gladys Walton at the Majestic

Gladys Walton has scored notably in recent months in screen vehicles which are more dramatic than the ones in which she appeared a year or two ago. The tendency to put her in roles requiring more emotional ability than comedy talent followed such pictures as "Second Hand Rose" and "Top o' the Morning," in which she proved herself a capable comedienne.

A current tendency in filmdom is to watch closely the selection of vehicles for stars and pay particular attention to the point of whether or not the stories chosen are really fitted to the personality of the players. Stories are not simply bought in a hurry because they have good dramatic points. Their features that present the stars with unusual opportunities are studied.

"A Dangerous Game," the Universal production coming to the Majestic Theatre tonight presents Miss Walton in a story which was considered better fitted to her than any in recent months.

REALTORS MEET IN NORTHWEST

PORTLAND, April 3.—Real estate men from the north Pacific states and British Columbia and Alberta, Canada, are expected here for the annual convention of the Northwest Real Estate association, July 18 to 21. Problems of real estate men and property holders are to be discussed, and questions of reclamation of stump and arid lands will receive attention.

NATIVES EDIT OWN NEWSPAPER

(By Associated Press.)

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, April 23.—Not to be outdone by his white compeer, the Alaskan native has stepped forward with his own newspaper, edited and managed by natives, with some native mechanical help. The first issue of the Alaska Fisherman, published by the natives of Juneau, sets forth the aims and ambitions of the aborigines of the territory. The fisherman is published under the auspices of the Alaska Native Brotherhood, with William L. Paul, editor-in-chief. Mr. Paul is a graduate at law and has been a thorn in the side of those who would exploit the native.

Among the cardinal principles of the brotherhood is free speech and freedom of the press. Adding its strength to the brotherhood is the sisterhood, a regularly organized auxiliary. One of the novel features of the rules of the sisterhood is the following:

"The duties of the local officers shall be prescribed by Roberts' Rules of Order, except that the critic shall be required to criticize favorably or unfavorably, any person and in any manner for the good of the order, and any person criticized shall submit graciously."

No woman's club has extolled the sisterhood in point of mutual cooperation in civic and domestic advancement, as is shown in the following:

"The Improvement of Home Committee shall make a report to the local camp of each house that needs improvement in the matter of health, cleanliness, orderliness, etc. The person criticized shall accept the criticism without comment and in a friendly way and shall be required to report at the next meeting that she has made the improvement."

WOMAN SO ILL COULD NOT STAND

Says Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Well and Strong

Glens Falls, N. Y.—"For over two months I was so sick I was not able to stand on my feet, and my husband did my housework. The doctor said an operation might be necessary. I read testimonial letters about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and began to take it. Before I had finished taking the first bottle I saw what good it was doing me. I am now well and strong, doing all my work for a family of four, all my washing and my sewing, which I think is remarkable, as I had not dared to run my sewing machine, but had done all my sewing by hand. I truly feel that were it not for your medicine I would not be here today as my case seemed very serious."—Mrs. George W. Burchell, Glens Falls, N. Y.

Hunt for "Dead Man" Brings Mystery

De Lafayette Flint.

The police of New Haven, Conn., are faced with an unusual mystery as they conduct a search for De Lafayette Flint, well-known school principal of that city, who was supposed to be dead in New York, but who cannot be located in the latter city. A telegram from New York to his landlady announced that he died in a hospital following an operation for throat trouble. No record of such a death occurs in any New York hospital. The telegram was signed "Dr. S. J. Brown." No such doctor can be located.

RHEUMATIC AGONY

NOW EASILY ENDED

Says Mr. James H. Allen of Rochester.

It does not matter to me whether you are disabled with cursed rheumatism or have only occasional twinges, I know that Allenrhu, my own discovery, will stop the agony, do away with the gnawing pains and reduce the swollen joints.

I know it will dissolve the uric acid deposits that have become deeply imbedded in joints and muscles and quickly drive every trace of rheumatism from your body. I know this because I was crippled for years and many times was unable to work, and Allenrhu made a well, robust, healthy man of me.

I know because since I cured myself hundreds have taken Allenrhu and speedily rid themselves of this agonizing disease.

No matter how severe your case, I urge you to put your faith in the prescription that it took me years to perfect—a prescription that made a new man of me after doctors tried and failed.

Allenrhu is no laggard; it starts right in at once; it gets into the blood, searches out the poisonous uric acid deposit and in two days starts to drive the concentrated impurities that cause rheumatism out of the body through the natural channels.

Through the columns of this newspaper, I authorize Nathan Fullerton, The Rexall Store, Roseburg, Ore. to guarantee one full pint bottle in every instance.

$10,000,000 YEOMEN HOME

BELLINGHAM, Wash., April 2.—The first juvenile Homestead in the United States with a complete ritual, known as Happy Thought Homestead No. 1, Junior Order of the Yeomen, has been organized here, with an membership of thirty-nine. The ritual was written by Mrs. Blanche McClough, of Bellingham, Supreme watchman of the national brotherhood and author of the Ivanhoe ritual, used by the national organization. Initiation of members will take place during the visit of national officers here April 28, for the purpose of inspecting the site proposed for the $10,000,000 children's home proposed by the Brotherhood of American Yeomen.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system, the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says, "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.

FARM REMINDERS

(O. A. C. Experiment Station)

Apple scab causing patches on leaves and fruit, attacks crab apples worse than other varieties, often causing the leaves and small fruit to drop. The use of a lime-sulfur spray (1-30) just as soon as the cluster buds have opened so as to expose the tiny blossom buds in the center is recommended. Another application of the spray is made just before the buds actually open. This will prevent the attack of the scab and give a chance for clean fruit to set if properly followed up by the later sprays. On susceptible varieties of apples these two scab sprays are absolutely necessary for best results and greatest profits. These two applications of scab spray are also the most effective sprays for mildew.

Corn makes a good crop for hogging down. Hogs fatten in good shape by this method and labor is greatly reduced. An acre of corn yielding 40 bushels will feed 20 shotes weighing 125 pounds for 15 days.
