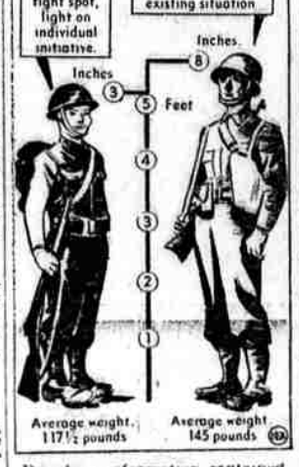
Yank Is Best Man



Based on information contained in an OWI report on the characteristics and traits of the Jap soldier, the chart above contrasts the average Jap with the average American Doughboy in height and weight. The Yank is far superior in his ability to "carry on" in tight spots. But, the report adds, the belief that the Jap is a stupid, insensate peasant is completely erroneous—he has, on the average, the equivalent of two years of high school, has been training for military life since the age of 8, and his courage is unquestioned.
