And That's Digging, Brother

Palm trees in the photo above are monuments to the achievement of Air Forces engineers in building air bases on Saipan Island. Trees, standing on what was once the surface of the ground, have been left high and dry by removal of millions of tons of coral rock for roads and airstrips. They now carry electric wires 75 feet above the quarry floor. Note size of man, indicated by arrow.
