An unprecedented program for long distance expansion

Thousands of miles of new circuits will be built on the Pacific Coast

During 1945, we handled more than 346 million long distance calls . . . an increase of some 57 million over the previous year.

That means we handled close to a million calls every day.

To meet the ever-increasing demand, we are now making an unprecedented expansion in long distance facilities on the Pacific Coast. Thousands of miles of new circuits are being built; special vacuum tube equipment is being installed to boost the number of calls existing lines can handle; new toll and long distance switchboards are being added.

Yes, we're expanding long distance facilities in many ways and preparing for the many new improvements to come. We're on our way to providing a better long distance service than you ever dreamed possible.
