THE FIRST LOVE.

Interest was excited the other day when President Harding met in Kansas a lady whom he described as his first love, a flame of schoolboy days. Now she is married and a happy and useful grandmother, but her memories of early days were keen enough so that she drove 100 miles to meet her former swain, and the president was mighty glad to see her. A pretty picture indeed. There is something very charming about such a childhood attachment. At about 12 years of age a boy or girl often wakes up to consciousness of the other sex. That was the date that Warren Harding used to keep company with his schoolgirl friend. For a good many years boys and girls seem to drift apart. Each views the habits and pursuits of the other sex with some contempt. But almost always for a little they have a preliminary touch of love fever, and forever after they look at the other sex with different eyes. Frequently an extreme bashfulness comes on about them, that makes the boy or girl withdraw into their own circles. Occasionally these early attachments prove permanent, but not usually so. They are unselfish. Children think nothing of social position or money, but choose their friends from personal liking. When two children have a boy affair and it grows into a wedded union, they must know each other well, and a happy home is sure to result. It brings back the past tremendously when a man and woman meets his first love after many years, and it makes them realize how time has flown and how sweet those old days in retrospect were. A childhood love affair often means keen disappointment for a time. But if the boys and girls have been clean and true, it will leave a sweet and pleasant memory. In later years they will meet with the pleasure with which President Harding and his friend of former years greeted each other.

Dear Folks:

When sister's beaus would call around, us kids would have some fun, because you see we knew the things that sister Lou had done. We knew she had had some other boys who brought her books and sweets, who came around with flashy ties, to offer many treats. So sister Lou would smile at us and call us precious dears, the well we knew that she was mad, and full of constant fears we'd tell some things we shouldn't tell to make her cheeks grow red. Upon my soul I sometimes thought she wished that we were dead.

But just the same we liked to tease by starting in to speak about our sound'ring what she did on Sunday of last week. But lollypops and sodas too were bound to stop our noise before we got to telling what she did with other boys.

One day she wores shiny ring and flashed it on the sly. 'That's good for something special in the candy line' thought I. But with the ring the fun all stopped, no other fellows came that we could use to talk about or play our winning game.

Then sister Lou got married and she looked so nice and sweet, I said "I'm awful sorry for the way we used to cheat." But Sis just hugged me great and tight and said "You darling boy, don't ever tell but 'twas your help that brought me all this joy."

GOOD EVENING FOLKS—

A professor told us
That it is perseverance
That counts and
He said it took Milton
Fifteen days to write
One page of a book
But that's pointing
I saw in the paper the
Other day where a fellow
In the pen spent twenty
Years on one sentence.

This Chicago weather makes one think of the title of that lately popular song, "Yes, we have no pajamas."

There's a place for everything—except your knees at the movie.

A man in New York was arrested for spanking his wife. Great Jumpin' heifers, will they take away every one of our innocent pleasures.

OUR VACATION ODE.

Camping is another left-handed way of spending one's vacation. Some day if you go about it in the right way, camping is the best vacation. But some just a pair of overalls, camping row (with oars) and the only right is coming back. Camping is a game of slinging yourself into enjoying nothing and getting the worst of it. The stuff you make yourself think sweet cookies or cooking, would startle wire your disposition of one twist in civil time. To give you an impressionistic idea of camping life, try this receipt. Get your duds out and in your ears, put on your blankets, vest your love in a twigs and stony beds, then envelope yourself closely—a target for mosquitoes, trying to start a fire with wet matches, open a can of beans with a knife, to sort off the good coffee grounds from the part spoiled with last out. Multiply that by 50 and you have it.

Cunard and White Star liners will return eastward dry. There will be no pounding on the bar when they set forth to sea.

"I'm two laps ahead of you now," said the first house-party girl to the second.

Valentino wants to forget "The Sheik." If he can help a few of the rest of us to do that same thing, we'll nominate him for the hall of fame and as a prize give him the mosquitos biting heels.

The women's page urges French dressing for dinners, in place of the heavier mayonnaise. But of course, if you're going to take an early trip north, it is well to take along some heavy mayonnaise in the old trunk.

A Stanford professor says the goddess on the silver dollar has adenoids. That of course it has been common knowledge for a long time that the gentleman on the $1 bill has false teeth.

"Wetty" of the Tulsa Tribune knows a Tulsa girl, says the Wichita Eagle, who paid twenty dollars for a bathing suit and wore it out sitting down.

Ain't nature grand these days, if you can find a place where nobody has had a picnic.

SON OF THE RIVER BANK

Don't care for a mocking bird,
In the blossoms singin',
Don't care for a dinner bell
For hungry fellers ringin',

For I'm on the river bank
Half a mile from town,
Watchin' at the water
Till the cork goes down.

Don't care for yer politics
While it wavs as runnin',
The river is a winner,
For its shady places runnin',

And I'm on the river bank,
And you can have the town
While I'm watchin' at the water
Where the cork goes down.

"Love and that, full of bats, sweet weight," a cadet asked his wife the other day. "That's just the way with you," she retorted. "When you want me to do anything, it's sweetheart, and any other time it's just plain old Sue. Go get your own tape."

Lyle Pelton Sez:

"Wish I'd wished to be a street car conductor so we could tell every one where to get off at."

GRAND GRILL OPENS 5-COURSE FEATURE

Down at the Grand Grill the management and entire force of help anxiously await the completion of the improvements that the building is undergoing just now, because elaborate plans for an exclusive service have been laid, but which can only perfect to be given while alterations are unsettled. Preparatory to putting into effect a service that cannot be excelled on the coast, Mr. Yount, the owner of the Grand Grill, engaged and brought to Roseburg Chef "Happy" Burgess, whose from Seattle to San Diego is an asset in his line, who will have charge of the menus. Mr. Burgess will be on the day shift, while Walter Mays, one of the best known chefs on the coast for a long time at Wright's in Seattle, will preside over the kitchen at night, the Grill being kept open until 1 a. m. daily.

The new fixtures for the dining room and kitchen are now here and will be placed probably by the middle of next week, but the exterior work on the building will not be finished for about three weeks. However, Mr. Yount has decided not to delay inauguration of his special five course business luncheons, so beginning Saturday, July 14, at 11 a. m. this superb service will be ready for patrons of this popular restaurant, Mr. and Mrs. Peters well known throughout the city will be in charge of the dest evenings, while Mr. Yount, who has worked hard to make the Grill one of the finest places in the state, will personally look after the comfort of guests and generally oversee the corps of efficient waiters. It will be Mr. Yount's ambition to personally meet all of his guests and cater to their wishes to the smallest detail in the matter of service. The special five course luncheon to be inaugurated Saturday will be a feature at the Grand Grill every day hereafter. The menu for tomorrow is as follows:

Grand Grill.

On your camping and fishing trips always take a generous supply of FRYE'S DELICIOUS BACON. You will want it with your eggs for breakfast, and a few slices, fried with the fish for dinner, will give them just the right finishing touch. If you like fine bacon, FRYE'S DELICIOUS will win your favor. The mild, rare flavor, the delicious tenderness, certainly appeal to the appetite.

More than thirty years' experience has taught us that only choice, young, grain-fed pork produces perfect ham and bacon. That's the only kind used for FRYE'S DELICIOUS BACON and FRYE'S DELICIOUS HAM.

Buying a whole FRYE'S DELICIOUS HAM is more economical, and FRYE'S DELICIOUS BACON costs less by the side. Then, too, it's so handy to have them hanging in the cooler ready for an emergency.
