OAKLAND WELL IS DEEPEST IN STATE

Having reached a depth of 1200 feet the well of the Oakland Oil company, just south of this city, is down farther than any other test well being drilled in the state, says the Oakland Tribune. Oil indications that have been struck are very promising, and it seems certain that the favorable expectations of the geologists who have examined the field will be realized. Drilling, which has been temporarily suspended, while additional casing is being put in will be resumed as soon as that job is completed.

This will extend the casing to a depth of over 600 feet, and will obviate any further inconvenience from cave-ins. It will also make possible an accurate test of any oil showings that may be encountered. While waiting for tools for this work the crew is busy overhauling the engines and machinery.

The progress that has been made is gratifying and demonstrates the determination of the company to push the work as rapidly as possible. In view of this fact the officers do not expect any difficulty in renewing the leases which they hold in this section. Much local interest has been shown in recent developments which should assure the company having the co-operation and assistance in every way possible of the people of this vicinity.

MANY COYOTES IN UPPER CALAPOOIA

Coyotes are finding it pretty unhealthy to live in the Upper Calapooia country these days, says the Oakland Tribune. Since the organization of the Ben More coyote club the varmints that shows himself in those parts is as good as dead. The latest victim was a big one that was killed by Marshall Hunt on Hinkle Creek Monday. Chas. Smith's two hound pups started the chase and made a good run. The coyote took across the Coe Manning place and up the Calapooia. At the Dave McCollum place he was met by a volley of shots from a revolver in the hands of Mr. McCollum. He escaped, however, and was soon afterward intercepted by Royal Abeene on horseback. He notified Giles Hunt who turned his dogs loose and soon brought the coyote to bay on Hinkle Creek below McCollum's. Here he attempted to fight off the dogs but was finally shot by Marshall Hunt.

GERMANS IN RUHR START FEEDING THEIR OWN HUNGRY

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

DUSSELDORF, Jan. 29—Unemployment in the occupied area of the Ruhr, which persists to an extrhordinary degree despite the agreements between the French authorities and German industrialists has had the effect of stimulating a feeling of responsibility for feeding the hungry among well-to-do Germans who heretofore have had the reputation of being more or less indifferent to suffering.

Within the last two months the better class families, realizing that the municipal authorities were practically helpless to cope with the spectre of hunger, have responded generously, with the result that most of the penniless unemployed are receiving at least one substantial meal a day.

THEFT OF BOOTS BRINGS 28 PRISONERS TO COURT

STAMFORD, England, Jan. 29—For the trial of one man, eventually put on probation for stealing a pair of boots, the following had to attend at the quarter sessions the recorder, the mayor, the deputy mayor, the clerk and his deputy, a prosecuting solicitor, a police superintendent, an inspector, two sargents, four constables, 40 jurymen and women, three reporters and the official shorthand writer.

OAKLAND MAN SHIPS TWO TONS OF TURKS

R. D. Bridges of the J. T. Bridges Co., of this city, went to Drain Tuesday where he purchased and shipped 4,500 pounds of turkeys at 25 cents a pound, according to the Oakland Tribune. He reports that the birds were of excellent quality. This was his second shipment from that place but he found that there is still a large number of birds left to market in that vicinity. In order to clean these up as well as those remaining in the neighborhoods of Elkton, Yoncalla and Oakland, Mr. Bridges is planning to ship out a carload during the coming week.

During the past season, Mr. Bridges states he has handled over 100,000 pounds of turkeys, more than any other buyer in the county. By developing new outlets for the unusually heavy crop in this section he has aided materially in setting and maintaining prices acceptable to the growers. Thus Oakland's claim to being the leading turkey market in the state has been well maintained and this prominence will doubtless bring future benefits to the growers of this section.
