DOWN PRINCE TO VISIT AMERICA

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—One of the highest compliments in diplomatic usage—a strictly private luncheon with the executive—is planned for the Prince of Wales upon his arrival in the United States for the international polo next month at Meadowbrook, says the Washington Post, adding that it understands the royal visitor will reach New York August 20.

The prince's call at the White House was decided upon, the Post says, after King George vetoed a proposal that he come to the United States incognito as Lord Renfrew. The king held that international courtesy required use of the prince's highest title on a visit to the United States, even though it might be only a pleasure trip, and this necessitated arrangements for him to pay his respects formally to the president.

The privacy of the luncheon, one of the few functions of its kind in American history, is attributed not only to the mourning of the executive family for Calvin Coolidge, Jr., but to a desire to return similar courtesies extended by the King and Queen recently to Secretary and Mrs. Hughes and to Secretary Mellon and his daughter.

Afterwards, says the Post, members of the cabinet and their wives may be invited to the White House, in a strictly informal manner to welcome the prince.

The prince will be met at New York, the Post says, by the British Ambassador Esme Howard, J. Butler Wright, third assistant secretary of state in a semi-official capacity and Major Oscar N. Solbert, the president's junior aide and former military attache at the American embassy in London, as the personal and unofficial representative of President Coolidge.

The executive has also detailed Major Solbert to act as personal aide to the prince during his stay in the United States.

After the matches which are scheduled to end September 14, the prince is expected to leave for his ranch in Manitoba.

LAUNCH PLANS FOR ROAD FROM CRATER

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

KLAMATH FALLS, Aug. 11.—Headed by Dudley Saeltzer, of Redding, president of the Northern California association a delegation of business men met last night with local business men at Klamath Falls in Modoc lava beds and launched preliminary plans for an interstate highway extending from Crater Lake to Lake Tahoe. Oregon's share of the new scenic roadway is already completed to the California line. The name "Cralaskak" formed from the first syllables of the Crater, Mount Lassen, and Lake Tahoe was tentavely adopted as the name for the route. Representatives of the northern counties will meet with the Klamath county chamber of commerce early in September to further perfect the campaign. This visit is to be followed by a delegation of Klamath boosters visiting all California points routed along the highway. Senator Frank Powers of Eagleville, California and Assemblyman A. J. Mathews of Susanville were among those participating in the conference.

CONDITIONS GOOD AT REEDSPORT

District Attorney Guy Cordon, and Sheriff Sam Starmer, returned Saturday evening from Reedsport where they represented the state in the trial of Roy Jones, who was found guilty of possession of intoxicating liquor. Two trials were necessary, the jury disagreeing on the first case. The second trial was brief and a verdict was quickly returned. Jones was fined $250 and given 30 days in jail. He was also fined $50 in the city court on a charge of drunkenness. After his incarceration in the city jail, he went to sleep with a cigarette in his hand, and set the bed clothing on fire and almost destroyed the jail.

Conditions at Reedsport, from the standpoint of law enforcement are good, the officers state. Booze is scarce and is not in evidence any more than in most other places in the county.

MEDALS ARE MADE OF INDEPENDENTS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—Thousands of bronze medals are to be struck off for distribution among contributors to the La Follette-Wheeler campaign fund. A model has been made by T. Gustavo Borglum, the sculptor, a life long friend of Senator La Follette. Dies are being prepared and the medals about the size of a quarter will be ready for distribution within a week or ten days. The medal shows a profile of La Follette, super-imposed on one of Senator Wheeler of Montana, his running mate. One will be given to each contributor of one dollar or more to the fund being raised in the interest of the independent ticket.

CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY

The public is invited to attend a silver wedding anniversary ceremony conducted at the Salvation army hall tonight, the happy couple being Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Gay of this city, who have just completed twenty-five years of married life. Ensign Stack will have charge of the service, resuming for another twenty-five years, if their lives are spared, the happy couple, who have been salvationists for many years. Refreshments will be served at the close, for which a small sum will be charged to benefit the local work.

The Luxury of Love

by VIOLET DARE

AUTHOR OF "The Half-Time Wife," "Love—or Fame?" ETC.

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED

MARY HAYWARD, a famous beauty, arrives at the country home of CAMILLA WAITE with two men, BRUCE GILLIAN and STEWART O'BRIEN.

Camilla warns Mary that she is in love with Bruce and that there is to be no poaching on her matrimonial preserves. Camilla realizes that Bruce is much interested in Mary and plots with O'Brien to prevent his proposing to her. Camilla keeps Bruce from Mary's side at the dance that evening, but late that night Mary goes into the garden for a breath of air, and unexpectedly meets him. He tells her he loves her, asks her to elope with him at once. But O'Brien intervenes. The next afternoon Camilla announces her engagement to Bruce.

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

X—HEARTBREAKING NEWS

"BRUCE and I are going to be married!"

Mary stared at Camilla, then at Bruce, her great gray eyes dark with fear. Oh, surely the fates could not be so unkind! Surely life could not be so cruel as this! Yet Bruce's eyes met hers unwaveringly, unsmilingly. Her lips shaped a question, "Is it true?" The barest ghost of a smile on his mouth, he nodded. She wanted to cry out in agony, to tear at her hair and beat her breast—grief's gestures are as old as itself! But she had to stand there, very pale and very lovely in her yellow frock, until she recovered control of herself, and then joined the others, who were crowding around Camilla.

VIOLET DARE

"I win my bet," she heard Atwood murmur to his wife, and Vera retorted, "Earn it, you do, and I was crazy for that sapphire bracelet!"

Camilla was jubilant; she threw her arms around Mary's neck, exclaiming, "Oh, my dear, I'm so happy!" Mary clenched her hands; she hardly knew her own voice as she answered, "I'm sure you are!"

She made her escape as soon as she could, saying that she had told the housekeeper she would arrange the flowers on the dinner tables; she had visited Camilla so frequently that the servants all knew and adored her. But once in the gardens, safely out of sight of the house, she sank down on the marble bench on which she and Gillian had sat the evening before. It was there O'Brien found her.

"Mary, dear, don't be unhappy," he urged. "Take it like a man—put Gillian out of your life. He couldn't really have cared for you—"

"That isn't true!" she interrupted, her voice choked with tears. "He loved me last night; I can't help believing that he loves me even now, though he is engaged to Camilla. There was something—why, it was as if we belonged to each other, as if our whole lives had been planned to lead up to that moment when he told me that he cared for me."

"Then how do you explain his going out with Cam today and asking her to marry him? Of course, he was hurt because you didn't join him last night, but he didn't even give you a chance to explain. Come, Mary; this isn't worthy of you. Why, you're the most beautiful girl in New York, one of the famous beauties of the country. And then you let this chap play with you. You can have any man you want—"

She turned away from him without speaking. There was only one man whom she wanted, and he was going to marry the girl who pretended to be her best friend!

She walked down the path at last and cut the flowers for which she had come, and as she cut them her grief was smothered beneath anger. How had he dared to treat her so? Poor she might be, but Stewart O'Brien had been right; ever since her debut two years ago she had been the most sought after girl in her set. Visiting men had always begged to be introduced to her; she had turned many a swain over to some other girl who was less attractive; had made many a match out of her "left-overs." Many of her invitations were due to that fact; Camilla herself had invited her to Havana that fateful winter when they first knew each other, simply because the eligible men always flocked to Mary's side, and she hoped to profit by being Mary's hostess!

And now this man out of the West dared to treat her as if she were just any wild dapper whom he could flirt with as he liked. Her heart cried out to her then, "No, not that. He was not flirting, any more than you were." But then—why, why had he acted so?

She was still angry when she dressed for dinner. Camilla had come in and turned the knife neatly in the wound by asking her to be maid of honor at the wedding.

Her grief was smothered in anger.

"It's to take place right away, the first of the month," she exclaimed delightedly. "Bruce is going to postpone his trip to Mexico, and then we'll go together. Fancy me in Mexico! He says he's going to leave me in some comfortable spot while he goes to his mines, but I just won't stay without him. My dear, he's the most wonderful thing! I didn't know that love could be like this!"

Mary pretended to be hunting in the closet for a frock. Camilla, prating of love, with her keen, calculating eyes judging the effect of every word—Camilla, who had no right to talk of love, after abusing it as she had!

"And do you know, my dear, I really was almost jealous of you last night," she babbled on, as Mary returned. "Imagine that—when all the time Bruce was madly in love with me."

"Run away and let me dress or I'll throw something at you!" exclaimed Mary, and was nearer to carrying out her threat than Camilla imagined.

DAKOTA CANDIDATE IS GORED BY BULL

SIOUX FALLS, S. D. Aug. 11.—Andrew S. Anderson, democratic nominee for governor of South Dakota, was gored to death early today at his farm near Beresford, S. D., 20 miles south of Sioux Falls in Clay county.

Telephone reports indicated that Mr. Anderson had gone to take care of the stock when one of the bulls in his herd became enraged and attacked him.

Mr. Anderson came into politics in 1916, when he won a seat in the legislature from Clay county. He was nominated by the democrats in 1918 as lieutenant governor and polled more votes than any of his running mates. He declined the democratic nomination for governor in 1922, but accepted it this year.

AIRPLANE SEARCH IS MADE FOR BOY

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—An airplane search for Lester La Fidus of Omaha, who disappeared from the citizens military training camp at Des Moines August 7, has reached Chicago, without definite trace of him.

Reports that the youth, who is 17 years old, had been seen in Galesburg, Ill. Friday and later in La Grange, caused the airplane search along the route.

J. W. DAVIS TO BE NOTIFIED TONIGHT

CLARKSBURG, West Virginia, Aug. 11.—The starting gun in the 1924 presidential race was sounded here today with the meeting of democratic leaders for the formal notification tonight of J. W. Davis of his selection as standard bearer of the party.

Alignment of the democratic forces was to be completed with the ratification by the national committee of the selection of C. L. Shaver as its chairman. Mr. Davis was to present his field marshal and to outline to the representatives from the states his own ideas of how his campaign should be conducted.

Reorganization of the committee had been deferred until the time of the notification ceremonies as had been the selection of the completion of the finance, executive and campaign committees.

After the committee meeting Mr. Davis' program was left free for rest until the notification ceremonies at Geff Plaza, but it was expected that he would use the intervening time in conferences with those in command of the party battle lines.

GRAND ARMY MEETS TO DISCUSS PEACE

BOSTON, Aug. 11.—Two commanders in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, one past the other present, the former legless since the battle of Manassas, and the latter with dimming sight last night in the old south church loosed their old fiery spirit and aroused their audience of fellow veterans and friends to patriotic fervor at the first public meeting of the 58th National Encampment.

The convention which will be officially greeted by state and city tonight is expected to bring six thousand or eight thousand G. A. R. men to the city.

Gaylor M. Saltzgaber, leader of the aged army during the present year, referred to the resolution against war adopted recently at the Methodist conference in Springfield and said its worth depended on the way it was interpreted.

"It is all right to denounce wars in general," he said; "but none of the wars in which the United States has engaged were unrighteous. If the nations could be brought to the same point of view as this country it would be right to disarm, but we cannot make the United States the prey of nations. Some would even tear down the Bunker Hill monument or that at Washington, so anxious are they to be rid of the memories of the past.

Corporal James Tanner, past commander-in-chief was carried to the pulpit. He, too, upheld the necessity of adequate national defense day. In plain words the old warrior condemned "hooded and veiled organizations," for which he said "there is not room under the stars."

"Let them go," he cried, "to some place where they can meet in darkness and dote on the time they can dwell in eternal darkness."
