TURNER STARTS FIGHT ON TEXT BOOK BOARD

"Early the following morning I was called into consultation with two members of the commission, Mr. Hug of Salem and Mr. Hampton of Astoria. It was agreed that if I would renew my motion in a different form so as to be 'in order' they would 'go down the line with me.' The minutes of the meeting that day will show that the three school men on the commission uniformly voted for the old books, all of which were readopted. The records will show also the opposition of the remaining two members of the commission to such a plan, and will also disclose the apparent friendly feeling of at least one member of the commission to the publications of the firm, in whose interests I felt I had been approached.

"My failure to play in with or be directed by his close friend on the commission apparently put me in disfavor with the governor.

Nominated For Office.

"The primaries in May resulted in my nomination on the Democratic ticket for state superintendent. The governor, in the course of the campaign, had given out that he would appoint to the position left vacant by Mr. Churchill, the successful candidate in the primaries. When, pursuant to this pre-primary statement, the governor offered me the appointment, I accepted.

"No mention was made to me by the governor at that time, or at any subsequent time, as to the advisability of my remaining a member of the textbook commission though he had ample and frequent opportunity to do so.

"Last Wednesday when I was in Pendleton for the purpose of attending the Umatilla county teachers institute, the governor called me up by phone and told me that I was no longer a member of the textbook commission. protested such summary action, and taking advantage of my absence from Salem to dismiss me from the commission. I stated to him that I felt as a member of the commission, I had saved him much grief in not following the ill-advised course of his friend in the commission; that I had rendered a distinct service to the state in the stand I had taken. I requested him to postpone for three days his action in the matter until I could return to Salem, and consult with him; that I desired to continue a member of the text book commission; that I intended to serve as such without compensation.

Postponement Refused.

"He would not accede to my request for 'three days grace' and said that I was no longer a member of the commission.

"When I inquired as to the cause of all this haste, he replied that 'strong pressure' had been brought to bear on him for immediate action in replacing me on the commission.

"When I inquired the source of the 'strong pressure', he declined to give it over the phone. It would be interesting, at least, to learn the source of this pressure.

"On the day the governor seemed hastily to determine upon my removal, this friend on the commission was in Salem, and in conference with the governor. Also, previous to my raising any question as to the part played by this friend of the governor, he has been protesting his innocence of any knowledge or part whatsoever in the affair. On Sunday he had Mr. Frank Fawk of Rickreall drive all the way to Portland in order that his innocense might be broadcasted to me, and to urge Fawk, as a friend of mine, to importune me not to make any 'public statement.' 'The wicked flee when no man pursueth; the righteous are as bold as a lion.'

Has Right To Remain.

"The governor states the cause of my removal is the statute which permits a citizen to hold but one lucrative position under the state. I did not expect to draw any compensation for my services as commissioner and so told the governor. Legal counsel had advised me that I could remain on the commission while filling the office of state superintendent of instruction if I accepted no compensation for my services as textbook commissioner. In any event the reason the governor gives for my dismissal was just as pertinent four months ago when he appointed me state superintendent as it is today. I could not see the reason of his waiting more than four months and taking no action in the premise, and then to seize upon a time when I was in a distant part of the state to accomplish my removal from the commission.

"Apparently the move was made to injure me in my candidacy before the electorate of the state at this time as a punishment for my refusing to be controlled by the governor's friend on the commission. If, in the adoption of August, 1925, I had done other I did, it would have been at the sacrifice of the welfare of the schools and the state and at an immense cost to the parents."

KIWANIANS ENJOY FINE PROGRAM AT LUNCHEON TODAY

A record attendance marked today's luncheon of the Roseburg Kiwanis club. The club has lately added many new members and practically all of these were present, while there was also a number of visitors present.

J. W. Perkins reported the victory of the Kiwanis club over the Rotary club in the golf tournament.

Mrs. C. S. Heinline made an announcement concerning the coming of the Moront-Olsen players describing their presentations.

Three instrumental numbers were then played by Walter Germain, who gave a selection on the trombone, followed by two saxophone solos. Miss Lucille Sappington accompanied him at the piano.

A short talk on sweet potato growing was given by W. C. Harding, who introduced William Harrison, of Garden Valley, who this year has produced the first commercial crop of sweet potatoes in Douglas county and who has had excellent success in marketing his product. Mr. Harding urged greater local support for this crop, and distributed samples to show that better sweet potatoes can be grown here than any place in the country.

The main address was made by Dr. Frank Matthews, pastor of the local Baptist church. Rev. Matthews spoke of the future prospects for the Pacific coast, stressing particularly the need for greater cooperation in the establishment of industries.

WORLD PROGRESS AND NEWS go hand in hand. Go back centuries before Christ, and you will find tablets recording news of the period. The Roman era had its reporters—men who apparently knew shorthand, for they recorded verbatim the speech of Cato in the great debate in the Senate during the trial of those concerned in the Catalinian conspiracy.

WORLD PROGRESS AND NEWS are companions today, as always. The Associated Press calls to your attention while it is still new, every event of importance destined to go down in the archives of history. Read
