Markets

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

PORTLAND, Ore., April 29.—Monday found butter and eggs undisturbed at Friday's quotations. The week-end demand took care of all surplus.

Several changes took place in poultry and fresh meat prices. Hens were higher at 26 to 27 cents; 1½ pound broilers were plentiful at 32 to 34 and colored broilers, over 1½ pounds, were offered at 28 to 30.

Choice lambs, packed killed, were lower at 25 to 28, while spring lambs were selling at 30 to 32, not a high price for this time.

In vegetables, celery, tomatoes and cabbage were still firm and tending higher.

Strawberries were getting cheaper. A crate of 15 cups was bringing $3.25 wholesale.

Hothouse cucumbers, green peas, green beans, new potatoes, local rhubarb and local spinach were abundant and fairly cheap.

The larger grades of oranges were still going up.

MISSED A THRILL

BOSTON.—Miss Wilhelmina Robinson, just recently turned 100, says: "I detest men, and I put down my long and happy life to the fact that I was never foolish enough to marry one. The girls of today are a scandal. It is men, men, men, all the time. I never asked a man to marry me—and no one ever asked me to marry him. I always hated men." Miss Robinson's only companions are two cats.

POULTRY CO-OP AUDIT SHOWS FINE FINANCIAL STATE

Assets amounting to $195,261.01 compared with total liabilities of $31,549.79 have been shown by an audit of the books of the Pacific Cooperative Poultry Producers, according to a copy of the report just received by J. H. Clark, of Roseburg, one of the directors in the association.

"Because of our connections with so many and varied undertakings as we encounter in our work and knowing thus how distressful and discouraging conditions are and have been for several months, we truly marvel at the results accomplished by you," the auditors, Kneeland and Alexander, declare in their letter of transmissal to the association.

"Business methods of other days," the state, "appear to be crumbling and some have passed away. Men are endeavoring to find something to replace or better and improve that which has been but is now failing to decay. They appear to be guided by the belief that the remedy is in consolidation and gigantic concerns. Guided by that which you have accomplished, it appears that a better remedy could be had through cooperation and confidence and trust, with the end in view to attain a reasonable and fair return for the service and the commodities supplied."

The fine record made by the association, Mr. Clark says, has been secured in the face of the worst sort of competition.

"Every possible effort is being made to break the association," Mr. Clark declares. "Some of the great concerns, heavy buyers of poultry products in Oregon, have been paying the growers more for eggs than the retail price, figuring that by an attractive price during the short season they can discredit the association. Then after the association has been beaten they can drop the price during the heavy laying season and can catch the producers on the swing."

Douglas county poultrymen are deeply interested in the success of the association, as it has been promised that an egg packing station will be built at some suitable location in the county as soon as 100,000 producing hens are signed up with the organization in this district.

Publishing Business in U. S. Huge Industry

Country Now Spends Around Thes Billion Yearly for Products of Printing.

NEW YORK, April 29.—America's printing and publishing business has become aumost a $3,000,000,000 industry.

A survey of the country based on department of commerce figures shows that in 1927 the value of all products of the publishing business was $2,5007,425,913, an increase of 10 per cent over 1925.

Meanwhile with the enormous stimulation given by the organization of book selling societies and the large increase in newspaper and magazine advertising, conservative estimates place the present volume around $3,000,000,000.

The latest available statistics obtained by the department of commerce state that 22,542 printing and publishing concerns were operating in 1927. More than 10,000 of these were newspaper or periodical distributors, 11,450 were publishers of books and job printers, and 119 were music publishers.

The total value of newspapers and periodicals printed same year was more than $1,500,000,000. In this connection the publishing industry occupies a special position in that 75 per cent of the value of its products represents "value added by manufacture," an unusually high ratio between raw material and finished product.

The average wage paid to newspaper workers increased 6.3 per cent between 1925 and 1927.

GEORGE TAYLOR, SPANISH WAR VET, DIES AT PORTLAND

George M. Taylor, aged 50 years, died Friday at the veterans' hospital at Portland. He was a veteran of the Spanish-American war, serving in Company C, 2nd Oregon Volunteers. He was a native of Nebraska and was a telegraph operator by profession. He is survived by his widow and his father, Sam W. Taylor, former commandant of the Oregon Soldiers Home. He also leaves two sisters, Mrs. Blanche M. Thursday of Portland and Mrs. R. B. Star of Gold Beach. The funeral was held in Portland this afternoon. Mr. Taylor is well known in Roseburg, having visited here on many occasions.

PIONEER INKEEPER, LOUIS KNAPP, DIES AT PORT ORFORD

Louis Knapp, pioneer hotelman at Port Orford, died at that place Sunday morning, according to word received here today. Mr. Knapp is well known to many Douglas county residents. He was born at Baltimore, Maryland, July 4, 1842, and came to Oregon with the Hermann family in 1859, landing at Port Orford where he made his home continuously after his arrival. He went into the hotel business soon after reaching Oregon, and continued in that business until two years ago, when he retired because of advanced age. The funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

MARATHON ROLLER SKATER PUT UNDER ARREST 14 TIMES

PORTLAND, Ore., April 29.—George Distel, manager of a roller-skating marathon which was broken up by police yesterday, established a record for himself that is likely to hold for some time. Between 12:15 a. m. and 1:15 p. m. Sunday Distel was arrested fourteen times and paid $2,000 bail.

At 12:15 a. m. he was arrested on a charge of operating without a license. An hour later he was arrested again on the same charge, and bail was set higher. At 2:15 a. m. he was again taken into custody and put up more bail. After that arrests were made at half-hour periods, with bail being increased each time. By 1:15 p. m. yesterday he had established a marathon record of fourteen arrests in thirteen hours.

The skating marathon started March 4. Police broke up the gathering after complaints had been made that the building had become a meeting place for drunks and criminals.

THE TINY MITES

STORY by HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES by KNICK

READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE

"Oh, my," exclaimed the Goofygoo. "It's awful! What am I to do? The Tinies' cabin's falling and they are all tucked inside. I brought them up here in the air, and now it seems it wasn't fair. I never should have taken them on such a high-up ride."

The Tinies, in the meantime, saw that they were falling, and in awe, they all began to holler, "Help! We're dropping to the ground. Won't someone make this cabin stop before we take an awful flop." The cabin kept on falling, as it swerved around and 'round.

Down through a cloud they quickly fell, and kept on dropping down pell mell. It seemed they must have been real high, which added to their plight. A short fall wouldn't be so bad, and many of that sort they'd had. But this was quite a long one, 'cause the earth was not in sight.

Then Scouty loudly shouted, "Oh! I see a patch of ground below. I fear that's where we're going to hit. It's almost over now. Why, I can hardly catch my breath. Are we to all be dashed to death? I'm praying that the Goofygoo will rescue us somehow."

And then the Goofygoo came near and said, "Cheer up, lads! I am here. I'll do my best to save you, though my plan may fall to work. Just don't fall out, but hang on tight. Perhaps this will turn out all right. When there are things for me to do, I'm never known to shirk."

Below the cabin he then flew. It was a right smart thing to do. The Tinies watched him closely. They were very nedr the ground. The Goofygoo then got a whack. He caught the cabin on his back. It finally balanced upright, and the bunch were safe and sound.

(There is more excitement in the next story.)
