POEM FOR THE DAY

By LOUIS ALBERT BANKS

THE NEW CHRISTIAN STATESMANSHIP

Always the ranking member of the cabinet, in the present administration the secretary of state is also the closest collaborator of the president. Daily Mr. Hoover and Mr. Stimson are in personal consultation. The telephone connecting their private offices buzzes several times a day. It buzzed in the course of the brief half hour I sat confronted by the big clock in the secretary's office, this time as a signal of one of those small "crises" forever cropping up in this nervous, international organism we call the world. Such crises, though never heard of unless they are allowed to develop, are as spontaneous and disturbing as the flickering fevers of children. They are reason enough for constant conference between White House and state department. So are the anxious preparations now going forward for the approaching meeting on naval disarmament.

But the chief reason for these daily conversations is that the policies Mr. Stimson is charged with carrying out means more to Mr. Hoover than any of his other policies. Not all the clamors of congress or the grand sweep of the plan to coordinate and stabilize business can obscure the fact that the first preoccupation of this government is with problems of world peace and that international stability without which our own is like the stability of a leviathan riding a tempest.—Anne O'Hare McCormick in the New York Times Dec. 15, 1929.

Keen Henry Stimson, man of power,
A man who fits the present hour,
Is Herbert Hoover's good right hand;
He has the splendid strength to stand
For what is right—the Christ ideal,
And patient tact to make it real;
He seeks to banish cause for hate,
And guide in peace our ship of state.

Wise Henry Stimson, versed in law,
Has dealt with manhood in the raw;
In Nicaragua's troubled glen,
And 'mong brown Philippino men—
In both these lands, found honest souls
Where truth and justice took their tolls.
The Golden Rule he there applied,
And found it soothed and satisfied.

This Conference yonder 'cross the seas
Has won our Stimson new degrees;
Upon a stage that was world-wide
He's been our glory and our pride;
His stock, already held at par,
Has risen like a shining star;
His work has reached a higher realm,
And showed rare wisdom at the helm.

His fame will rank with Seward, Hay,
And glorious names all down the way;
He'll stand in line with Root and Hughes—
A trio where 'tis hard to choose—
Of men who, in their time and date,
Have handled, well, affairs of state;
Of men who were so true and just
They had the nation's faith and trust.
