MORE WHEAT IN WORLD THIS YEAR

Canada Shows Decrease In Her Crop—Argentina Has Good Yield

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—With the harvesting of wheat in October in Northern Canada and Scotland, the 1921 crop harvest of the Northern Hemisphere will be brought to a close. October will also mark the opening of the 1921-22 grain harvest in the Southern Hemisphere where harvesting will reach its height during the months of December, 1921, and January, 1922.

As far as can be ascertained from the reports thus far received in the Bureau of Markets and Crop Estimates, the world production of wheat for the current season was slightly more than last year. This comparison includes the 1920-21 harvest in the Southern Hemisphere and the 1921 in the Northern Hemisphere and shows an excess of about 125,000,000 bushels in 1921 over 1920. Estimates of the total crop of wheat in the 27 countries (including the United States) for which statistics are available for 1921, aggregate 2,496,247,000 bushels. The wheat crop of 24 countries for which returns for both years are available, amounted in 1921 to 2,466,164,000 bushels and to 2,346,375,000 bushels in 1920.

Canada Has Less Wheat.

The harvest in Canada is now drawing to a close under favorable conditions. Recent preliminary estimates show the production of fall wheat to be 15,672,000 bushels, as against 19,[illegible] bushels last year; spring wheat [illegible] bushels, as against 247,[illegible] bushels; all wheat 294,987,000 bushels as against 267,180,000 bushels.

In Europe, with the exception of Russia, the agricultural season has turned out more favorably than was at first anticipated. France has apparently produced approximately 320,000,000 bushels of wheat for the season of 1921, which is about 90,000,000 bushels more than the estimate of last year's crop. Seasonable weather is now prevailing in France, which will, no doubt, facilitate the autumn plowing and seeding. Germany is experiencing about the same weather conditions as France. Her harvest has been completed under favorable conditions and the production of wheat is unofficially estimated at 607,984,000 bushels, as against 82,859,000 last year. As far as can be ascertained, with one or two exceptions, the remaining countries of Europe have all produced about normal yields for the season of 1921.

Argentine Has Good Crop.

News from the Southern Hemisphere continues to indicate good prospects for fairly large crops. In Argentina conditions have become more favorable for growth. Recently rainfall has been general throughout the grain producing areas. In Australia good agricultural prospects seem now to be assured. Rains are general all over the cereal growing districts and the growing conditions are reported as favorable. Recent estimates place the area of wheat in Australia for the season of 1921-22 at 9,445,000 acres, as compared with 6,415,000 last year and in the Union of South Africa at 850,000 acres, as against 801,000 acres last year.
