THEATERS

Wonderful Cast Seen in "The Fog," Showing Last Time Today at Sherry's.

Nathan Forge, as played by Colen Landis in "The Fog," at the Sherry, is just such a youth as Kipling must have had in mind when he wrote "If"—one who could meet every emergency. And there were plenty of things to stand up against—a scheming, hypocritical father, poverty, blasted love affairs, disillusionment and misrepresentations that kept the sensitive boy in a mine of fog until he found the ideal love of which he dreamed. Nathan Forge is one of the best character studies we have ever seen on the screen, and he is portrayed by Colen Landis with fine sympathy and restraint.

Mildred Harris gives a beautiful interpretation of a difficult role as Madelaine Trendlen, the girl whose love was the light that pierced through the fog of Nathan's life and brought him happiness.

The whole cast was selected with care judgment. Each player in this amazingly fascinating photoplay lives his part and the result is a consolidation of the leading types of screen acting. The cast includes such notable players as Louise Fazenda, Lionel Wolcott, Louise Dresser, Marjorie Dreyer, Ann May, Ralph Lewis, David Butler, Frank Carver and Edward Phillips.

We can't remember when we have sat through a more absorbing picture. The unusual story by William Dudley Pelley is packed with adventure, thrills, pathos and emotional appeal. Incident is piled on incident in rapid-fire fashion right up to the powerful climax. These incidents are pleasingly unified by the masterly direction of Paul Powell.

Comedy showing, "Seeing Double."

"St. Elmo," Romantic Photoplay, to Be Shown by Arcade Today And Tuesday

A picture of romantic charm has come to the Arcade theatre in the William Fox offering, "St. Elmo," starring that dashing young actor, John Gilbert. Gilbert, who is fast becoming one of the most popular and intriguing lovers of the screen, is given excellent opportunity in this screen version of Augusta Evans' popular novel to display his sincerity and acting ability. He makes the most of it.

Barbara La Marr is prominent in the cast, and this popular player's vivid brunette loveliness is seen to excellent advantage opposite the impassionable love making of Gilbert. Bessie Love is as the dasy covered with cool morning dew as against the passion flower fire of Barbara La Marr. The contrast in leading ladies is splendid. Others in the cast supporting the star includes Warner Baxter, Nigel De Brattier, and Lydia Knott.

The story has to do with St. Elmo Thornton (played by John Gilbert), whose faith in his friends and humanity in general is wrecked when he finds his sweetheart (played by Barbara La Marr), in the arms of his supposed pal. In a highly dramatic duel, the pal is killed. Edna Earle (played by Bessie Love) sees it all. Later Edna lives with St. Elmo's mother. The curious working of love and its effect on St. Elmo and the girl develops the plot of this picture into a gripping climax. Its ending, need it be added, is all that can be desired.

"St. Elmo" will be the attraction at the Arcade today and Tuesday only.

A comedy is also being shown.

Gambling Ban Is Protest Cause

MADRID—Habitues of the Reformatory Prison at Granada are on their dignity as a result of the decree forbidding gambling in prison.

Surprising a party of prisoners playing "Monte"—a game of chance absolutely forbidden following the recent coup d'etat—the jailers shut up the prisoners in punishment cells, whereat they protested loudly that the game had been tolerated in prisons from time immemorial. Other inmates joined in the protest, and the result was a combined attack on the warders who were forced to call in troops with fixed bayonets before the mutineers were restored to obedience.

A more severe regime is now in force, and the prisoners are even more displeased. A petition has been sent to the Directorate complaining of the tyranny of a regime that forbids gambling and refuses prisoners the right to carry knives and daggers. In short, they ask the Directorate: What is going to happen to the country if there is no liberty left even in the prisons?

A hopeless radical is one who curses Coolidge for what he thinks he would have said if he had said anything.

Still, as a means of meeting reparations obligations, passive resistance was about as effective as passive indifference.

Girls Should Earn Education Is View

BERKELEY, (INS) —"Every student in college should make himself economically independent by working whether he is in need of money or not," said Dr. J. H. Plexotto, head of the social economics department of the University of California, in an interview recently.

She advised a period of five years to be spent in college, working several afternoons a week to the extent of about 30 hours a month. In this way a girl can earn from $20 to $30. If this is done not more than twelve or thirteen units of work in school should be taken.

She believes that no girl who works her way through college should take a position of responsibility because it is a severe strain on the nerves. But any position where a girl is under the direct supervision and direction of another, with a given thing to do and a given time to do it in, will not tend to impair her health through straining the nerves.

"I believe that girls who work their way through school get more out of college than those who do not," said Dr. Plexotto, "provided always that they do not undertake too much. They gain knowledge in an added field of education, the ability to shoulder responsibilities than those of personal experience, the ability to work harmoniously in cooperation with and under the supervision of others. In clerical work there is much valuable business experience acquired. And from work in private homes a girl and the knowledge of home duties and problems and acquires the happy faculty of living with others in a home environment.

"I think that a girl who does outside work gains much more from college than one who is constantly dependent upon money from home and who is free to idle away her extra hours. Extra work," she added, "does not preclude any girl from taking part in campus activities."

Increased Athletics Prolong Life of the Women Today—Claim

BERKELEY, Cal. (INS) —"Modern woman's increased physical activity is as yet but a small factor in prolonging the span of life," said Dr. R. O. Moody, professor of anatomy at the University of California, commenting on a statement recently given out by the American College of Surgeons in which modern women were given a large share of credit for lengthening human life.

In time, according to Dr. Moody, the woman of today will be a potent factor.

Efforts by the medical profession and child welfare organizations to decrease infant mortality are, in Dr. Moody's opinion, the most important influence at present toward longevity.

Apparently European nations are not contemplating anything questionable. None of them is asking for America's moral support.

At any rate, Americans will learn patience as they await their turn in the cafeteria, the barber shop and the Federal courts.
