"Secrets of Paris" Showing at Sherrys Today Only.

The plot has been founded on Eugene Sue's novel, "The Mysteries of Paris." But it does not follow the book, changes having been made to suit picture production. As altered, the plot deals with the king of a fictitious European kingdom, who, when he was prince, was in love with a woman, whom he was prevented from marrying for reasons of state. When he accepts the throne, he goes in search of his love, but finds her daughter instead, the mother having died. First he does not know that the heroine is his sweetheart's daughter, but feels sympathy for her; he takes her out of the slums and gives her an education. The leader of the Apaches abducts her for the purpose of extracting money from the king, and when the king goes to the slums to save her, he too, is held a prisoner, and with the heroine placed in a cistern to be drowned by turning on the water. But a young Apache, who loved the heroine, at the risk of his life, saves them both. The king, when he becomes aware of the heroine's identity, makes her queen.

The underworld atmosphere is realistic. Acting, direction, settings, photography — all are up to the standard. The cast consists of well known, able players; it includes Lew Cody, Montague Love, Gladys Hulette, Willie Collier, and others. Also showing a comedy.

'The Eternal Three' Coming to Arcade Three Days.

Is the eternal triangle an isosceles or a right angled triangle? That is, are all sides equal in the diagram of love, or are there greater distances and sharper angles among the several principals?

Hobart Bosworth, veteran screen star, who has just been through two of the biggest triangles of his career—as Lord Steyne in Hugh Hahn's "Vanity Fair," and as the famous surgeon in Marshall Neilan's second Goldwyn picture, "The Eternal Three," which comes to the Arcade theatre Thursday for three days, speaks with authority on the question.

"The eternal triangle is a right angle triangle," says Bosworth, "one side is certainly longer than the other two. There are distinctly three places in the triangle, first, second and third. First place, A, is occupied by the one sought after, that is, the one desired by both the other two. Second place, B, is held by the one rightfully entitled to A, but who somehow feels himself slipping. And third place, C, is the villain, the one who comes in and breaks up the happy home. A and B are living along on a straight plane, or on the level as it were, until C makes his appearance. Then A starts looking up to C and finally a line of communication is established. This forms the right angle. At last when poor B wakes up to the situation, he, too, forms a line of communication with C, but his line is longer and his angle sharper—very much sharper.

But mathematics are too deep. At any rate the show is held to be an exceptional one—that you mustn't miss seeing.

RED PEPPER FOR RHEUMATIC PAIN

Red Pepper Rub takes the "ouch" from sore, stiff, aching joints. It cannot hurt you, and it certainly stops that old rheumatism torture at once.

When you are suffering so you can hardly get around, just try Red Pepper Rub and you will have the quickest relief known. Nothing has such concentrated, penetrating heat as red peppers. Just as soon as you apply Red Pepper Rub you will feel the tingling heat. In three minutes it warms the sore spot through and through. Pain and soreness are gone.

Ask any good druggist for a jar of Rowles Red Pepper Rub. Be sure to get the genuine, with the name Rowles on each package.
