Organizations Fight For Christmas Trees

lem to which America must give immediate thought.

"The proper cutting of trees for Christmas use in most cases permits sturdier trees to attain greater growth. True conservation of the forest results not from leaving trees to grow old and die, but from their wise use when they are needed, in whatever size, by man.

"Two foresters, whose profession is to manage and protect the forests, assert that the use of Christmas trees is proper and wholly justifiable. Professor Ralph S. Hosmer says 5,000,000 trees a year in one space would require, at the most, 10,000 acres.

"The United States forest service has recently stated that 'our remaining forests of all sorts are being cut at the rate of about 10,000,000 acres a year.' Ten thousand is one-tenth of 1 per cent of ten million. Even if it took the clear cutting of that area to furnish us with Christmas trees each year, it would be but an infinitesimal part of our yearly drain on the forest."

For the north and east and even as far south as Washington, D. C., the forests of northern New England New York and eastern Canada furnish the supply of Christmas trees. It is a definite seasonal industry. The trees are graded as to size and condition and shipped in carload lots.

Many towns and cities have in late years taken to planting well-developed trees in a centrally located park as Community Christmas trees.

PARDON POWER IS UNDER FIRE

crally termed criminals.

Attorney General Stone, appearing in the case at the special request of the president, made his first argument in court since becoming head of the department of justice. He asserted that the president's pardoning power must be determined by considering conditions which existed at the time the constitution was framed. Then, he said, it was the established practice for the courts to recognize that the executive had powers to pardon in all contempt cases.

Only One Limitation

Only one limitation was imposed by the constitution, Mr. Stone insisted, upon the president's power to grant pardons, and that applied only to cases of impeachment. This indicated, he held, that the framers of the constitution intended that in all other matters the president's pardoning authority was complete.

In the Grossman case, the attorney general asserted, "the offense" which consisted of a second alleged violation of the prohibition laws, was punishable by indictment and trial. It was a matter of convenience and authorized by the Volstead act to attempt to prevent such "offense" by issuing padlock injunctions, he argued, and the fact that Grossman was punished by the court for contempt after his violation of an injunction instead of being indicted and tried by jury for a second violation of a criminal statute did not impair or in any way lessen the validity of the pardon which the president had granted.

Ore. Wool Growers Ass'n to Meet at Pendleton Jan. 14

The Twenty-Seventh Annual convention of the Oregon Woolgrowers' association will be held in Pendleton, Oregon, January 14th and 15th, 1925, according to statement received from Mac Hoke, secretary of the association.

Mr. Hoke states that the sheep and wool growers of Oregon are facing the brightest prospects for the coming two or three years that the industry has ever known; while prices are not expected to reach war time levels the cost of production is expected to be stabilized and to remain at such a level that the returns from lambs and wool will show the grower a reasonable profit from his operations.

It is apparent that there is not only a world shortage of wool but likewise a shortage of breeding ewes and prices being offered at this time for lamb contracts and for wool are likely to be well maintained for a considerable length of time.

Scourge of African Lions Fires His Last Shot

CAPETOWN, (AP)—"Yank" Allen, the terror of South African lions, has died here but only after he accounted for 253 of the beasts. Allen, who was a native of Texas, came to South Africa 17 years ago to rid the British South African company's ranches of lions. So well did he do his work that for the last ten years lions in the company's district became about as abundant as bison on the American prairie, and he eventually cut himself out of a job. His bag of lions is a record, even for South Africa.

Allen's description of a lion was that it was nothing more than a big dog, and that it was safest not to open fire until the animal was within 20 yards of the gun.

Business in Sofia Carries Heavy Burden of Taxation

SOFIA (AP) — Bulgaria, like other countries in Europe, is paying off war reparations and obligations, and on schedule time.

A resident of Sofia, in the publishing business for 25 years, recently showed correspondent how the money to do this was obtained. He turned to his books and revealed tax bills as follows: 1914, 371 leva; 1920, 5300 leva; 1922, 10,200, and in 1923, 33,400.

The same increase is applied to every kind of business in Bulgaria.
