REPEAL DEMANDS WORRY WRITERS OF PARTY PLANKS

were accepted in the new Republican platform to the accompaniment of hundreds of ringing palms.

It was the prohibition plank, declaring against flat repeal of the eighteenth amendment but calling upon congress for a substitute providing federal control of the liquor traffic, which made everything else unimportant to most of the delegates for the time being.

Garfield Reads Plank

Weary from almost 36 hours of constant work on the party's policies for 1932, the bespectacled James R. Garfield, son of the late president, read the planks to the restless convention.

As Garfield concluded, the tall, silver haired Senator Bingham, of Connecticut, opened the wet attack with a demand for submission of prohibition to the states for repeal. The majority in the galleries and many on the floor were with him and showed it.

Two hours debate were granted the president's leaders — Garfield, Secretary Mills and John L. McNab, of California — rallied the convention against the repealers headed by Bingham and Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, of New York. If the verdict had been on cheering alone the latter would have won.

The administration prohibition plank declares for law enforcement; condemns referenda; deprecates partisan consideration of the issue; urges attention on "many pressing national problems;" opposed submission confined to retention or repeal and concluded.

Democracy to Rule

"We, therefore, believe that the people should have an opportunity to pass upon a proposed amendment the provision of which, while retaining in the federal government power to preserve the gains already made in dealing with the evils inherent in the liquor traffic, shall allow states to deal with the problem as their citizens may determine, but subject always to the power of the federal government to protect those states where prohibition may exist and safeguard our citizens everywhere from the return of the saloon and attendant abuses.

"Such an amendment should be promptly submitted to the states by congress, to be acted upon by state conventions called for that sole purpose in accordance with the provisions of articles V of the constitution, and adequately safeguarded so as to be truly representative."

The rejected Bingham substitute called for immediate resubmission of prohibition to state conventions for retention or repeal, advocating state liquor control in event of repeal.

Endorses Hoover Fully

The new Republican platform, quickly adopted after the liquor exchange was over, endorses the Hoover policies up and down the line. It recommends loans to the states for unemployment relief; development of co-operative marketing under the farm board; revision of veterans' legislation to adjust inequalities and to provide economies; adherence to the world court; and revision of the tariff through the tariff commission to plug breaks in the wall resulting from depreciation of foreign currencies.

It also proposes federal regulation of electric currents transmitted across state lines; an international conference on the monetary problem, including the subject of silver; congressional authorization for American participation in international conferences to be called when the violation of the Kellogg peace pact is threatened; laws to curb racketeers and kidnapers; and tariff protection for natural resources, including the products of the farms, the forest, the mines and the oil wells.

In contrast with the 1928 platform declaration, there was no mention of the billions owed the United States by her former allies.

MacDONALD PLEADS FOR U. S. SUPPORT the form of a resolution of the conference, a request that the United States cancel all war debts was considered.

"The world looks to us," Macdonald continued in his keynote speech, "as it has never looked to an international conference to find agreements to end the present distress.

"Europe cannot act alone. The United States has encouraged us to believe it will cooperate in some of the wider problems and join with us in devising a policy for the encouragement of trade and the enrichment of nations."

Every one was gratified at the American decision, he said.

A period of political tranquility was necessary, he said, in order that the nations might not be distracted by the dread of wars. "At some point in our deliberations we may have to turn our minds to that," he added.

Trade restrictions among nations also, he added, are disrupting order and progress.

"A system is crumbling under our feet," he said. "Wisdom and common sense compel the return to better ways without delay. This can be done if we have vision and steadiness of nerve."

DO YOU INHALE?

Copr., 1932, The American Tobacco Co.

"Everybody's doing it!"

7 out of 10 smokers inhale knowingly—the other 3 inhale unknowingly

DO you inhale? 7 out of 10 smokers know they inhale. The other 3 inhale without realizing it. Every smoker inhales—for every smoker breathes in some part of the smoke he or she draws out of a cigarette.

Do you inhale? Of course you do! Lucky Strike has dared to raise this vital question... because certain impurities concealed in even the finest, mildest tobacco leaves are removed by Luckies' famous purifying process. Luckies created that process. Only Luckies have it!

Do you inhale? More than 20,000 physicians, after Luckies had been furnished them for tests, basing their opinions on their smoking experience, stated that Luckies are less irritating to the throat than other cigarettes.
