SINCE July seems to be something of an anniversary month, why not give a thought to another great benefactor of humanity—Edward C. Berner of Fond du Lac, Wis.

Berner, who died recently, claimed to be the father of the ice cream sundae.

He often told the story of how a customer walked into his ice cream parlor one hot July day, 39 years ago. He ordered an ice cream, and "Put some of that on it," he said, waving at a bottle of chocolate soda flavoring Berner held.

Now Berner was an experimental soul, and he did it. He might have cried, "No, no, a thousand times no! This has never been done!" But he didn't. He tried it, and liked it, and recommended it, and sold it, and introduced a new delight to the world.

A modest achievment? Perhaps, but which would you rather have invented, the ice cream sundae or the thermite incendiary bomb?

One reads so much about military aviation and bombing planes these days that it seems as though all air progress were military.

That is far from true. Quietly, and with little public attention, private flying for sport and business is making tremendous strides in this country. A single company, for instance, reports that it has built 712 planes in the first six months of 1939, almost equal to its entire production for 1938. These planes are a type of no possible military use. They are built and sold for sport, travel, and business use.

That is an impressive number of private planes to go into use during six months from a single plant. Many of the early automobile companies were in business for a long time before they achieved production at that rate.

It means that America is taking to the air, not only for military purposes of defense, but in the normal courses of peaceful pursuits such as the Wright brothers envisioned when they first lifted their crude ship into the air at Kitty Hawk.

You've seen pictures of those machines that test shoes. The shoes, mounted on rods sticking out of a wheel, come down on the "pavement" successively as the wheel revolves, thus giving a rough equivalent of the use a shoe gets when a wearer walks in it.

Now an ingenious Hollywood expert has devised a similar machine to test lipstick. It will bring into contact two pairs of "lips" made of a plastic material, at a pressure adjusted by mechanical means, endlessly osculating, hour after hour, until the motor burns out.

First off, we were tempted to cry, "The mechanical age has gone far enough!" After all, the displacement of the human element must stop somewhere.

But on second thought we're a little less indignant. Somehow we don't think it will ever be really popular—we are confident that in matters osculatory, people will never be satisfied by anything less personal than the genuine article.

Mountain over the week-end for the seventh annual meeting, a curious phenomenon was to be observed.

Americans, normally, are pleased by good (or at least better) roads. This year the meeting place on Hart Mountain was far more accessible than ever before, as the CCC had smoothed out the cow trails by which the mountain has hitherto been reached until they were passable at fair speed. Next year, the spot will be even more accessible, as what under the circumstances approaches a boulevard is headed for the remote rendezvous on the mountain's side.

On every hand, among the Antelopers, was GRUMBLING!

THE reason, of course, is rooted among the odd and never wholly predictable reflexes of the male human animal.

This gathering of the Antelope clan (originally founded to promote the setting apart of the Hart Mountain reserve) is held each year on the side of a mountain in a remote and more or less trackless desert. To reach it in the past has required a mild, modern approximation of physical hardship. The surmounting of these mild hardships, has contributed to a state of mind that has made the meeting of the Order of the Antelope an annual precious moment in the lives of some dozens of men scattered from Mexico to Canada.

These new CCC roads, you see, have had the effect of shattering this illusion of hardship to reach a goal, and so have disturbed and slightly SOURED the romantic state of mind that more than anything else has made the annual meeting of the order a high moment in the lives of its members.

ANYWAY, there was grumbling aplenty as the Antelopers assembled at their high mountain tryst. This writer, probably as hopeless a romanticist as any of the lot, joined in the anvil chorus as the impending new boulevard was discussed.

The CCC has a lot to its credit, but the members of the Order of the Antelope are hoping it chokes on its own dust before profaning any further the secret sanctuaries of the desert and limiting with roads the wide sweep of its horizons.

BULLET MISSES OFFICIAL OF UNION

CRESCENT CITY, Calif., July 28.—(AP)—Sheriff Huffman continued today his investigation of what he termed an attempt on the life of William Gettings, International Woodworkers of America representative for the Redwood district.

Huffman said a bullet fired from outside narrowly missed Gettings' head as he switched on the lights in his home. The asserted attack was not disclosed until last night pending the sheriff's investigation. The sheriff said he had heard rumors of threats against Gettings because of his union activities, but he did not indicate there were any suspects under investigation.

RAMBLINGS

By PAUL JENKINS

I NOTICED yesterday that the golden-rod is in bloom alongside the highway north of Yoncalla. Sight of it always induces in me nostalgic memories.

When I was a boy my family always went to visit Grandmother sometime each August and, that being a gala occasion, we dressed up for it. My dressing up seldom amounted to much—bare feet, which may or may not have been washed by a watchful mother the night before; clean, and probably faded jean britches, somewhat tight in the seat. (It's strange how childhood tastes stay with a fellow—to this day I am comfortable in only the absolute decent minimum of clothing, insisting, however, on more room amidships).

But we dressed up the horses, and the family surrey. When we'd come to the first patch of golden-rod, which always was in bloom at that season, Dad would stop the team, and we'd all pile out and pick a handful, and stick the biggest panicles in the rosettes on the bridles, where they waved gayly with each movement of the spirited heads beneath.

All day long, or in the hours of a moonlight night, I would see these golden, waving plumes as my eyes searched the unwinding road ahead, until, as the years multiplied and we continued invariably this quaint practice, golden-rod attained for me a significance entirely apart from its natural beauty—in the dimness of my early recollections today it stands more for the happiness of childhood, its innocent diversions, its family ties.

As each July comes to a close and August approaches and is here, I'd go a long way, if it were necessary, for the sight of a plume of golden-rod.

"I want a hamburger, double thick," I told the presentable young woman at George McClane's restaurant in Canyonville as I stopped there for lunch one blistering afternoon a couple of days ago.

"If this hamburger isn't done enough," said she as she brought it to me a few minutes later, "just put it out in the sun for a minute or two!"

LOCAL PASTOR JOINS STAFF OF ACADEMY

Elder Frank W. Steunenberg, who for the past two and one-half years has been pastor of the Seventh Day Adventist church at Roseburg, will become a member of the staff of Laurelwood academy, near Gaston, Oregon, at the beginning of the school year in September, it was announced today. The announcement was made at the Seventh Day Adventist camp meeting, now in progress at Gladstone park, near Oregon City. Elder Steunenberg will be employed in the academy as Bible teacher. The academy is a boarding school with high school standing.

PEAR MARKETING REFERENDUM SET

PORTLAND, July 27.—Pacific coast winter pear growers will be asked to vote on a continuing marketing agreement and order in a referendum scheduled to begin next week, it was announced today by G. A. Nahstoll, field representative at the Portland headquarters of the division of marketing and marketing agreements, U. S. department of agriculture.

The new program, developed at the request of growers and shippers, replaces a similar one which operated during the 1938-1939 marketing season. It is being offered to growers and shippers following a series of hearings held last May in Oregon, Washington and California.

Ballots on which growers may cast their votes, accompanied by copies of the tentatively-approved marketing agreement, are being mailed directly to all known growers of Anjou, Bosc, Winter Nellis, Comice, Easter and Clairgeau varieties of winter pears produced in Oregon, Washington and California.

Arrangements to handle locally voting by growers who do not receive ballots through the mail are now being made, according to Nahstoll, and growers will be notified of polling places as soon as possible.

If given the necessary industry approval through the grower referendum and signature by shippers, the program would include the following major provisions:

(1) Regulation of pear shipments by minimum grades and sizes named in the agreement;

(2) Provision for changing such minimum grades and sizes after the first year of the program's operations;

(3) Federal-state inspection of pears shipped interstate or in foreign commerce;

(4) Proration of administrative expenses among handlers;

(5) Exemption of pears shipped for gift purposes;

(6) Establishment of an administrative committee of 12 members and their alternates, comprising one grower and one shipper member and alternate from each of the two districts in each of the three states.

Adoption of the program by the industry involves a two-thirds favorable vote of growers voting in the referendum, and signature by handlers representing at least 50% of the volume of fruit shipped interstate and in foreign commerce.

If given the required industry approval, the program will receive final approval by the secretary of agriculture, resulting in issuance of an order embodying the marketing agreement and making the plan applicable to all handlers.

REHEARING ASKED IN ESTABROOK CASE

SALEM, Ore., July 27.—(AP)—State Coordinator Ralph E. Moody filed a petition for rehearing today asking the state supreme court to reconsider the decision by which it reversed the bombing conviction of Jack Estabrook, secretary for Portland A.F.L. Warehousemen, who was convicted of complicity in bombing a Washington county beer tavern.

The high court reversed the case on religious grounds, holding the state violated the state constitution by questioning a defense character witness as to her religious beliefs. She was a Christian Science practitioner.

Moody, in today's petition, argued that the questioning of the witness was not prejudicial to Estabrook's case, and that the high court's decision also should be reconsidered because of a further constitutional provision that if the high court considers that justice was rendered, it should not reverse the case because of an error committed during the trial.

Estabrook was convicted at his third trial, juries having failed to reach a verdict at the two previous trials.

The high court will rule on Moody's petition when it returns from vacation early in September.

OREGON RANCHER COMMITS SUICIDE

CANYON CITY, July 27.—(AP)—Coroner C. O. Guernsey said Guy Laycock, 55, killed himself with a revolver in the front yard of his ranch home four miles west of John Day last night.

Survivors are his widow, a stepson and a brother, William Laycock of Long Beach, Calif.

Character

We are building every day,
In a good or evil way,
And the structure as it grows,
Will our inmost self disclose.
Till in every arch, and line,
All our faults and failings shine.
Do you ask what building this?
That can show both pain and bliss,
That can be both dark and fair,
Lo, its name is Character.
Build it well, what'er you do,
Build it clean, and clean, and true,
Build it strong, and high and broad,
Building it for the eye of God.
And be ye thankful.

"He that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock." Matt. 7:24. Amen.
