HITLER and Stalin, the powerful dictators of Europe engage in a rather silly procedure when they are determined to destroy a smaller governments. They charge the smaller government with all sorts of depredations and then advance with planes, bombs, troops, artillery and ships—all, so they say, to save their mighty empires from further damage by the small nation. That was the technique in the Czechoslovakian campaign, the Poland conquest, and now it is in its final stages against little Finland.

The Italian dictator was more forthright. When he decided to take Albania he just took it with out apology or preliminary thin explanations. He did about the same thing when he wanted Ethiopia.

The Japs, however, were the originators, in the present era of the now commonly used territory grabbing technique.

News concerning Finland, until the recent trouble, in the newspapers of this country has resulted mostly from the fact that Finland was the only European country to pay her debt to us.

It seems in order, therefore, to give a brief sketch of this little nation.

From about 1150 to 1809 what is now (for a few days more at least) Finland was a part of the kingdom of Sweden. Then it became a Grand Duchy of the Russian Empire.

In 1917 Finland declared its independence and established a provisional government, becoming a republic in 1919.

In area, Finland is about half again as large as the state of Oregon and has about two-thirds as large a population as the state of California.

The conflict has resulted mainly from the fact that Russia wants three Finnish-owned islands which control the approaches to Leningrad. Russia covets control of the Aland islands which guard the entrance to the Gulf of Bothnia. Russia is eying Hogland island as protection for its naval base at Kronstadt. Russia grabbed rights from Estonia easily, but it is up against a more stubborn opponent now.

Germany, however, is the real villain of the piece to the Finns. While the nazis hated the reds, Finland relied on Germany to offset soviet pressure. It granted Hitler privileges in the strategic island of Kotka, a port reportedly sought by Russia. Now Germany seems to be willing to give Russia complete control of the Baltic as far west as East Prussia.

echoed back from Mount Tamalpias, and 70,000 fans paused in open-mouthed admiration.

It was her last chance for three heart-breaking quarters, and by the fourth, when the two Stanford scores came, she'd given it up and gone.

HUMAN nature is human nature, wherever you find it.

Barely 70,000 spectators gathered to see this contest for the cellar championship in a stadium that holds 92,000. If the Rose Bowl had been at stake, it would have been far otherwise.

Say what you will, it takes a winner to raise the public's pulse beat.

TWO minutes before the end of the game, misled by a husky firecracker somebody loosed, the Bear rooters swept down on the field and did as neat a job of goal post uprooting as will be seen in many a day.

Coming back to the city, in the endless double lines of traffic, an ancient roadster, filled with students held a position just ahead of this scribe and one boy held a piece of goal post a good three feet long. Sir Lancelot himself never clasped his mighty sword with greater reverence.

It's great to be young on the day of the big game. Don't let any cynic speak to the contrary in your presence.

WAR 25 Years Ago Today
Bulletins in ROSEBURG REVIEW

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY OF THE GERMAN CROWN PRINCE IN FRANCE—"Undoubtedly this is the stupidest, most senseless, most unnecessary war of modern times. It is a war Germany did not want, I can assure you, but it was forced upon us, and the fact that we are so effectually prepared to defend ourselves is now being used as an argument to convince the world that we desired the conflict." The above were the words with which Frederick William, crown prince of Germany, opened the first interview ever given a foreign newspaper man. . . . "But Germany was left no choice in the matter. From the lowest to the highest we all know that we are fighting for our existence. . . ."

LONDON—King George left here tonight to visit the fighting men on the continent.

PETROGRAD—The Slavs hopes for a complete victory over the Germans in Russian Poland rest on the enormous reinforcements the czar is rushing to that region. Experts stated their expectation was to crush the Germans completely south of Plock and in the Lodz region.

BARBS

Sacramento, Calif., fire department applicants must do a mile run at a pace that would be stiff for a trained athlete. At last someone is doing something about all the track stars who can't get coaching jobs.

Phoenix, Ariz., is a city without debts. As soon as the word gets around, the city hall will be jammed with salesmen.

Police in Springfield, Mass., hold the key to a night club every night and give it back to the proprietor every morning to make certain the operator won't violate the closing laws. And who watches the cops?

Judges of the world court will continue to hold office without an election this year. It's one of the jobs today for which there is a shortage of applicants.

Ten minutes after a judge suspended sentence on a woman for disturbing the peace, the complaining witness married her. That's taking a hair off the dog that bit him.
