FROU-FROU IS VICTIM OF WAR

Subdued Simplicity Marks the Paris Mode

PARIS.—The clothes in current collections of the Paris couturiers are essentially simple, with that well-bred look which French designers always have achieved so expertly. There's a dearth of fron-fron. Touches of whimsy have given way to beautiful lines, subdued trimmings, elegant fabrics.

Helene Yrande's housecoat (left) is a shining example of the restrained motif. Of pale lilac wool with encrusted waistcoat of gay rose, green and purple tweed, it has a full hemline, slight train and long sleeves.

The day dress (right) by Molyneux, is of black wool with a semi-fitted, unbelted waistline and light blue buttons to match the velvet scarf and toque.

The "covered up" evening ensemble is more popular than those which expose back, arms and shoulders. Smartly simple is the one by Molyneux (center) which includes a backless dress in periwinkle blue mousseline de soie and matching silk crepe. Notice the unique knuckle-length jacket.

P. M. SMARTNESS

A SMART ensemble for afternoon or informal dinner includes a street length dress of gray velveteen with crystal bib necklace, a shirred bag of black suede with a wide, sash handle and a black velvet hat with exaggerated snood.
