AS THE WORLD GOES BY.

(Oregon Journal.)

The determination of two young couples to beat the depression is told by the Cottage Grove Sentinel. Out of work and looking for a chance to turn an honest penny, they took advantage of the demand for wild blackberries. The four made it a point to arrive at Culp Creek each morning at 3:30. There they parked their car and headed for the deep woods, reaching the berry patches about 6 a. m. The four at the end of the day's picking have carried as much as 13 gallons from the patches to their car. Altogether they marketed 86 gallons of berries at 50 cents a gallon. In ordinary years wild blackberries sell at $1 a gallon. In addition, these couples have picked cultivated berries on shares, bought and sold chickens at a profit, and canned 150 quarts of fruit. One of the women picked her full share of the berries while carrying a finger in a splint. Theirs is the spirit that depression can not defeat.

Los Angeles county allocates $7,400,000 for unemployment for the new fiscal year. Fifty old streetcars, set aside by the car company, are to be converted into dwellings for the homeless. They will be the nucleus of a little village for headquarters for the unemployed within the city. Surplus California food products will be utilized by the state food administrator as one means of relief. What a spectacle, in a country in which the mutual savings bank deposits are $1,233,000,000 more than they were in the great prosperity boom three years ago and in which bank savings exceed $29,000,000,000, or more than $1000 for every family in the land! Amid such superabundance, what but blundering government and incompetent administration could bring on the absurdity of people having to live in old streetcars?

Proof of High Culture in Sodom and Gomorrah

The inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah reached a high state of culture before they were destroyed by "brimstone and fire from the Lord out of heaven."

The people of the two cities lived before the Iron age, but they exercised great ingenuity in utilizing other materials. The excavators found stone ovens in the irrectangular houses. These are similar to ovens still in use in some peasant parts of northern France, England, Wales, and Ireland.

Traces of violent conflagrations were found in the ruins, tending to confirm the Biblical story of the city's destruction. One excavator said that on the plain below the hill on which the cities stood there was a curious rock formation, about five feet high, which legend associates with Lot's wife, who, according to the Biblical story, was turned into a pillar of salt at the time the cities were destroyed.

The excavators penetrated twenty-six feet and dug through three cities, each built on the ruins of another. Underneath these three, they said, is probably a fourth. The ruins of Sodom and Gomorrah were found in the top layers.

Scientific Account of "Missing Link" in China

Scientific measurements of sinanthropus, the pre-human creatures whose skulls were discovered near Peiping, show them to have been "the most primitive type of human being yet discovered," according to Prof. G. Elliot Smith, distinguished British anthropologist.

These measurements were reported by Dr. Davidson Black of the Peking Medical college, one of whose Chinese students made the discovery. Months of work were necessary before the two skulls could be cleared of rock accretions and put in condition for exact measurements. One was the skull of an adolescent boy and the other of a woman.

The boy's skull, Professor Smith says, is more primitive than that of the celebrated pithecanthropus, the Java ape man, who thus far has been the earliest known representative of the human species. The measurements show, the British authority holds, that the brain of sinanthropus was still little specialized, while that of pithecanthropus already had become quite set, marking him as near the end of an evolutionary line.

Thus it is probable the Chinese pre-human was much closer to the direct line of descent of modern man.—Detroit News.
