ADVICE ON MEASURES.

The Sentinel trusts that every voter has given careful study to the measures upon which he is expected to vote in November. If he has not done so, he should, for it is impossible for him to get the full arguments for and against without a full reading of the voters' pamphlet. There are but three state measures this year, so there is really no excuse for not giving them study. The Sentinel will review them briefly.

No. 300-301—Grange power bill. Appears on ballot by referendum. The measure occupies five and a half pages in the pamphlet. The purpose is state development, distribution and sale at cost of water power and hydroelectric energy. State bonds to be issued therefor upon vote of the people. This bill was enacted by the legislature to put into effect an amendment previously adopted by the people.

It is unnecessary to argue the benefits and dangers of public ownership. Most voters already know whether they favor or oppose government in business. It is rather odd, however, that most of those who believe all public officials to be crooks and grafters are loudest in proposing more opportunities for political manipulations. The Sentinel believes most public officials are honest, but it believes in going slow in giving them more business to handle for the reason that our political system makes it almost impossible for public business to be handled in the same manner as private business.

The state already has the power to keep electric rates at a reasonable figure and we should take care to see that such developments as that at Bonneville are not given away with little benefit to the people who own the natural resources, but it is not necessary to pass the power bill in order to protect those rights. Go slow is good advice in times like these, and the power bill gives altogether too much authority to a political commission of three men.

While the power bill does not carry a bond issue, it provides the machinery that may result in bonds to the extent of $60,000,000 being issued and it does permit issuance in large quantities of certificates of indebtedness. The Sentinel is for the present opposed to anything that looks like a bond issue or that has the slightest threat of an increase in public expenditures. We must reduce our public debt and cut all our budgets.

The power bill permits taking away a million dollars in taxes now being paid. We can not reduce our debts by such a decrease in our receipts.

Joe Dunne, republican candidate for governor, has outlined a plan for taking advantage of Bonneville power development without the state incurring further indebtedness.

The Sentinel believes it safe to vote against the power bill and it can see no harm in delaying this kind of power legislation, should it prove desirable, until we are in condition to float more bonds and assume more debts.

301-303—Twenty-mill tax limitation amendment. Proposed by initiative petition.

The Sentinel is in sympathy with any proposal that promises a reduction in property taxes, provided means remain for carrying forward our schools and conducting the public business. No other method of providing tax funds is provided in the measure, for the reason that there seems to be no other method except a sales tax, and the authors knew that to include that in the measure would defeat it.

Some see in this measure a method to force sales tax on the people. While The Sentinel would favor a sales tax that would relieve property, it does not believe in forcing anything on the ptople.

The only faults The Sentinel has to find in this tax limitation amendment are the one mentioned and the further one that without a substitute tax the cut to 20 mills at one fell swoop is too drastic. One of the authors of the bills, who spoke here recently, seemed to be of the same opinion. At least, he wished the limit had not been placed so low.

Figures compiled from accurate sources show that under the amendment the city of Cottage Grove and the school district would get only a little over half as much money as they now do. About the only expenses the city could cut would be salaries. There wouldn't be a cent for police protection, for an engineer or a recorder. The schools would have to cut the term in half or cut in half the training of pupils.

When one of the authors of the bill was asked whether the amendment would leave any money for the institutions of higher learning, he said he wasn't sure. He was unable to show that they would. We certainly do not wish to do away with our university, our state college, our normal schools.

We who pay property taxes, and certainly want relief, are not willing to kill off our schools and disrupt city and county government to get that reduction.

304-305—Healing arts constitutional amendment. Proposed by initiative petition.

This is another measure in the contest between so-called regular physicians and chiropractic and naturopath physicians. The so-called regular physicians feel that anyone treating for bodily ills should have certain knowledge and pass certain examinations required of the so-called regulars, while the chiropractors and naturopaths feel that they should set up their own examinations free from those who undoubtedly sincerely oppose such a procedure, also that those with bodily ailments should be their own judges as to what qualifications they wish in those they call to treat them.

The Sentinel makes this explanation, but it does not wish to argue the case. It will grant reasonable space for arguments by anyone from any of the professions affected.

GETTING THE FOOL.

San Francisco has a system of traffic control that acts instantly. When a pedestrian steps from the curb against a red light or jaywalks in mid-block, an amplified voice fills earth, sky and air with the question, "Do you know you are violating the traffic laws?" The Argonaut tells of results. "Embarrassment and confusion are guaranteed to last the offender through a full week of good traffic behavior—perhaps for a long life-time."—Portland Spectator.

Something is also needed for treatment of the hog who comes tearing up to an intersection and from half a block away honks for everyone to clear the road. We suggest a good machine gun in the hands of a world war veteran as about the only thing that will do this fellow any good.

DUNNE SAFE AND SANE.

Although Senator Joe Dunne is the most talkative of the several candidates for governor, he has not in any of his campaign addresses made any statements out of harmony with conservative conduct of the chief executive's office. While he has expressed sympathy with many progressive ideas, such as old age pensions and development of the state's natural resources, he has not made any rash promises and has proposed no fantastic program to plunge the state into debt.

Joe Dunne seems by far the safer and saner of the several candidates and also to be well advised. It's a wise candidate who makes no errors in his advisors.

Dr. Robt. E. Cornish can bring beings back to life, but they are without brains. There are a lot of folks who could be brought back to life by the doctor and no one would dectect the fault he mentions.

And now, with perfumes also being made for men, the only way we'll be able to recognize the women will be by their skirts.—Eugene Register-Guard.

If the R-G is correct as to the only means of identification left, the feminine is rapidly becoming extinct.

The output of golf balls for 1929 is reported to have been a million and a half. Something wrong. Didn't anyone else lose any?

C. P. STRAIN SPEAKS.

To the Press: There being no agency except the press equipped to compete with grange politicians in molding public opinion, I have ventured to mail out this circular in hopes that it may serve as a reminder of the present opportunity for high public service.

The plan of grange organization affords the state master and his executive committee great opportunity for controlling the sentiment of grange members: 1. The 300 grange halls plus traveling expenses out of grange funds are at their disposal. 2. The Grange Bulletin is under their control.

When the state master and this committee is composed of, or dominated by, office seeking politicians, it is inevitable that these facilities will be used whether consciously or not to mislead grange members. Recent state masters and some of this committee have been, and now are, seeking office. Candidate Zimmerman is a member of this committee. Being human, they are probably as greedy for power and spoils as any other politicians and no more scrupulous in their choice of political methods.

Contrary to grange principles, grange politicians disregard our direct primary laws. They supported Governor Meier as an independent in 1930, and then promptly deserted him without visible cause. They are now bolting the recent direct primary nominees for governor. In self-justification, they are charging that General Martin and State Senator Dunne are tools of what they claim to be a wicked power trust and other divisions of Big Bad Business. Such reckless attacks upon our prominent leaders and high officials are playing into the hands of Russian communism whose policy it is to prepare the soil for violence and armed revolution by first teaching the people to distrust and then to hate those who must make, interpret, and execute our laws.

There being about 20,000 grange members in the state, honest, loyal, but unsuspecting and credulous, each of whom we may assume to have influence outside the grange, it is evident that a political machine in control of the sources of grange information constitutes a grave threat which can be removed only by the light of publicity, the means of which the press so largely controls. Gay Melodies Keynote of New Rexall Program

De Wolf Hopper Deserts Theater to Sign for Rexall Series.

When the Kansas City Philharmonic Orchestra, under the direction of Karl Krueger, late of the Vienna Imperial Opera, inaugurated its series of Sunday afternoon concerts for the REXALL stores on October 14, it did not play the heavy and often sombre type of music that America has unfortunately associated with large orchestras heretofore.

Mr. Krueger contends that such a broadcast should be light and gay and inspirational, rather than depressing, and also assures us that there is a wealth of such compositions in the finest musical literature. The whole series of REXALL programs will be played in this gay mood.

The sponsors of this program have spared no expense to make it an excellent entertainment . . even to the wooing of the stage's most famous personality, De Wolf Hopper. Mr. Hopper will serve as narrator on the program and carry on as announcer and jovial raconteur throughout the season.

The usual complement of vocal and instrumental soloists will add to the charm of these Sunday afternoon concerts and each month, a special wire to Boston, Massachusetts, will bring Mr. Louis K. Liggett onto the air for a personal talk with the 10,000 REXALL Druggists throughout America. The program will be heard in this vicinity at 1 P. M. on station KGW. The Rexall Store in this city is Kem's for Drugs, located at Sixth and Main.

Prohibition Means "Back To Bootleg Control"

VOTE PROHIBITION DOWN AND GIVE STATE REGULATION A FAIR TRIAL

You Can't Prohibit.

The only thing prohibition could do in this county would be to make the county both unlawfully and lawfully wet and make law enforcement practically impossible. It would force the county to forfeit its share of state liquor revenues that formerly went to bootleggers but now is going for old age pensions, mother's aid and unemployment relief.

Means More Taxes

It would put on the county and tax payers new and additional taxes to make up for the loss of state liquor funds and for the employment of prohibition snoopers and spies that were such nuisances during prohibition days.

A prohibition law could not possibly make the county dry, but it would make it a paradise for racketeers and bootleggers.

Bootleggers Want Prohibition.

The reason why bootleggers are working hard now to secure passage of county dry laws is due to the fact that under county prohibition they can make home brew and wine and import legal liquor to supplement their moonshine supplies and remain perfectly safe from police molestation unless caught making actual sales.

Dry Laws Can't Work.

The law specifically prohibits the arrest of any citizen who cares to make home brew or wine, use them or give them away. The law also permits any citizen to import and consume as much hard liquor, beer or wine in dry territory as they care to purchase, and enforcement officers cannot touch either the liquor or its owners.

Why Enrich Racketeers.

Since the law would close both state liquor stores and licensed establishments retailing wines and beers, it can readily be seen that prohibition would give the bootleggers a practically clear field. Then lawless racketeers would get rich on liquor profits that are now going to the state under the present State Liquor Control Act.

State Control Is Winning

Since the state liquor commission took over the sale of hard liquor a year ago and control of the manufacture, distribution, and sale of beer under license, it has reduced bootlegging by fifty per cent. Its next problem is to run out the disorderly retail beer and wine operators and support responsible retailers. The state liquor commission has already announced this policy and has publicly stated that it will not renew many licenses in the state upon their expiration December 31 of this year.

State Regulation

1. Is making big gains for actual temperance.
2. Is driving bootleggers out of business.
3. During 1934-35 is contributing $1,500,000 to state and county for old age pensions, mothers' aid, and unemployment relief without cost to tax payers.
4. Is Oregon's only source of relief money to match federal relief funds.
5. Is steadily strengthening law enforcement. After first of year a large number of irresponsibly operated retail beer establishments will be out of business.
6. Is reestablishing respect for law and is ending prohibition's fourteen years' record of lawlessness, ill will, intolerance, and hyprocrisy.

Vote Against Prohibition

—and against return to bootlegging and all its proved evils. Vote against prohibition that would force forfeiture by the county of its share of old age pensions and unemployment relief funds, and destroy the good already accomplished by the state's liquor control law.

Support the state law and law enforcement by voting down prohibition!

VOTE 307X AND 309X AGAINST PROHIBITION AND GIVE THE STATE LAW A CHANCE
