Hill Inspects Oregon Trunk

Mr. J. J. Hill saw the Oregon Trunk last Friday for the first time. He expressed himself more than pleased with the construction of the road and, as far as the Deschutes canyon, he said that he found that exactly as he had pictured it in his mind, a rugged gorge forming a gateway into a vast empire.

Everything indicated that Mr. Hill was immensely pleased with the Oregon Trunk line. He considered the roadbed of excellent construction and appeared especially pleased with the progress that has been made.

The trip through a portion of the Deschutes river canyon took the Hill party to Shearer's bridge, the old wagon bridge over which the settlers have for years hauled their products to the Columbia river. At this particular point the Deschutes river canyon narrows down to a mere rift in the vast plateau through which the river winds its way, and the railroad hugs the river bank very closely.

The run was made very leisurely to give opportunity for close inspection. Very little of the surrounding country is to be seen from the railroad which in places, is hidden among cliffs arising to an elevation of 2000 feet above the river bed, but Mr. Hill was not surprised or disappointed at this for, though he had never seen the canyon, he said he had drawn just that sort of a picture of it. He was pleased with the scenic wonders of the panorama as the train pulled into the canyon and followed the winding and turbulent river.

Recently the capital stock of the Oregon Trunk Railway was increased from $5,000,000 to $20,000,000. The road is owned jointly by the Great Nortnern and Northern Pacific. This increased stock issue will permit an issue of bonds, it is said, further to extend the line into Central and Southern Oregon.

WHY SALVES FAIL TO CURE ECZEMA

Scientists are now agreed that the eczema germs are lodged not in the outer skin or epidermis, but in the inner skin. Hence, a penetrating liquid is required, not an outward salve that clogs the pores.

We recommend to all eczema patients the standard prescription Oil of Wintergreen as compounded in liquid form known as D. D. D. Prescription. A trial bottle of this D. D. D. Prescription, at only 25 cents, will instantly relieve the itch. We have sold and recommended this remedy for years, and know of wonderful cures from its use. We recommend it to our patrons.
