

Sky lanterns outlawed starting Jan. 1

STATESMAN JOURNAL

Beginning Jan. 1, it will be illegal to release sky lanterns into the air in Oregon.

A sky lantern is a paper sack suspended over a flame, usually from a small candle. The hot air from the flame causes the balloon to rise into the air and be carried off by the wind.

"Although they are pretty, sky lanterns are uncontrolled, open-flamed devices that pose an extreme fire hazard to people, property, and the environment," said Oregon Chief Deputy State Fire Marshal Mariana Ruiz-Temple in a press release. "Once released you have no control over where they may land. They could end up on someone's rooftop, in a tree, or a pile of debris and cause an unwanted fire."

Salem man leaves children at home, chases wife, rams car

WHITNEY M. WOODWORTH
STATESMAN JOURNAL

The Salem man who chased his wife, rammed a car she was riding in and caused it to crash had left his 2- and 4-year-old children home alone to pursue his wife, officials said.

Beki Tarupi, Rinta Walliby and Dererene Lodge, all of Salem, were driving to work Dec. 22 when a vehicle driven by Lodge's husband,

Rino Simion Rino Simion, 32, struck their car three times. The collision triggered a rollover crash on Silverton Road NE near 76th Avenue NE.

Simion told investigators he looked out his window at the crash before driving away.

Lodge was ejected from the vehicle. Walliby and Tarupi were trapped and had to be extricated by fire personnel. All three were taken to Salem Health hospital in critical condition.

Investigators interviewed all three women at the hospital. They recounted seeing Simion follow them in a black, four-door vehicle and repeatedly ram their car. Lodge, who was only able to whisper during her interview in the emergency room, told nurses she was worried about where her children were at the time of the incident.

Deputies located Simion at his North Salem home a few hours later and took him into custody without incident, according to a probable cause statement filed in Marion County. He admitted to leaving his two children home alone while he chased his wife.

A Salem Health hospital spokesman said Tarupi and Lodge were listed in fair condition Friday afternoon. Walliby was discharged after receiving treatment.

Simion was arrested on charges of first-degree domestic assault, two counts of first-degree assault, three counts of serious injury hit-and-run and two counts of second-degree child neglect. A document filed in Marion County alleged that Simion "unlawfully and intentionally" caused injury to the three women with the car, a dangerous weapon. It also stated he endangered the health and welfare of his two young children when he "unlawfully and with criminal negligence" left them home alone.

He appeared for arraignment before Judge Steven Reed on Friday. Marion County prosecutors said Simion was a public safety risk and asked he be held without bail. Reed set Simion's bail at $462,500 and set his next court date for Dec. 30. First-degree assault is a Measure 11 offense and requires a mandatory minimum sentence of seven years and six months.

forward to working together."

Issues facing the city will have some impact on the police, but overall 2016 remained a stable year for the department.

Chief of Police Jeff Fossholm noted that there were improvements in getting officers downtown foot patrol visiting businesses and continued youth bicycle education.

While there were no personnel changes, there were some slight shifts in responsibility. Senior Officer Josh Boatner was given the detective assignment in July and Senior Officer Tim Hein was given the motor traffic officer assignment in September. With the implementation of the school resource officer, J.J. Lamoreaux had an effective and busy year working throughout all schools in the district.

Looking ahead, Fossholm pointed to the budget process beginning in February and the challenges it will bring.

"We plan on the continuation of training and training opportunities for staff and building upon what we have already accomplished," he said.

The Silver Falls School District also realized a year of growth.

The new school year began with an increased enrollment (now at 3,850 students), the opening of Silverton Middle School (grades 6-8) and new grade configurations for Robert Frost (grades 3-5) and Mark Twain Elementary (grades k-2). These changes led to the closure of Eugene Field School which is now for sale.

Superintendent Andy Bellando emphasized that student performance improved last year, especially in math and reading. Attendance was up two percent across the district and the high school graduation rate hit 90 percent, the highest of a five-year growth trend.

"I'm pleased with our continued efforts at creating uniformity in all schools in the areas of technology access, student supports, grade reporting and professional development of all staff members," he said. "We still have work to do though especially in the areas of mental health, counseling and early intervention supports."

Regarding 2017, he stated, "I am concerned about adequate funding to fully support the needs of our district based upon the recently released Governor's budget. While Measures 98 and 99 (approved by the voters) result in targeted funding in our schools, I anticipate some very difficult funding decisions in order to maintain all of our essential programs."
