Soviet Moons to Soar Above U.S.

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

NEW YORK, Aug 10 (AP)—Russia will give Americans a grandstand seat to see the Soviet man-made moons sent up to explore space.

But few Russians are likely to see American-made moons.

The reason is not a moon curtain—it is not international. It just works out that way due to the orbits each nation has chosen.

Our moons or artificial earth satellites will travel generally east to west around the world.

This means they will be visible only certain distances north and south of the Equator. The northern-most of moons could miss Russia almost entirely. It could miss Europe and many northern U.S. cities also.

To Cross U.S.

But the Russians will send their moons wheeling north to south near the poles. As the earth rotates beneath them the moons will cross all parts of the United States as well as Russia.

Both countries plan to send man-made moons circling the earth during the International Geophysical Year. Shot up by rockets, the little metal spheres will be the first explorers of space.

Instruments and radios inside the balls will tell us how empty or cold space is, how intense the sun's rays are, how many cosmic rays and meteors flock through space.

So far the Russians have said very little officially about their moon plans. It's a guessing game whether they can launch one before we do, probably early next year.

But Prof. I. P. Bardin, president of the Soviet Int'l committee, has announced the Soviet moons would be launched at a small angle to the meridian from a yet undisclosed spot in the U.S.S.R.

Wide Area Visibility

This means they will fly north and south and therefore be visible in all areas of the earth except the central areas of the Arctic and Antarctic, he said.

The U.S. moons—six are planned—will be launched on a southeast course from Cape Canaveral, Fla. Reasons for this site are explained by Dr. John P. Hagen, director of Project Vanguard.

Cape Canaveral is the site of the Air Force test missile center and is equipped to do the launching job.

The planned U.S. orbits will take the moons over 70 sites where telescopes tracking cameras are being set up.

Defense Chiefs, Ike Study Use of Small A-Arms

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON, Aug 10 (AP)—President Eisenhower and the National Security Council are understood to be recasting the nation's basic military-political strategy.

The idea is to make the strategy conform to the spreading development of small atomic weapons and an official conviction that limited nuclear warfare will be possible in future.

Whatever understanding may have been reached between Russia and Soviet leaders at the 1955 summit conference that a nuclear war is impossible is regarded here as no longer valid.

Atomic Holocaust

It is presumed that Russia as well as the Western powers would like to avoid a world-engulfing atomic holocaust and will make determined efforts to that end. However, the belief that an East-West atomic conflict would lead to total devastation is giving way here to the idea that the existence of small nuclear weapons will make a limited military clash or brush fire conflict entirely conceivable in the coming years.

This concept is reported to have inspired a profound rethinking of basic policy and planning.

Two Major Points

Officials say the full implications will become clear only as tactical atomic weapons are fully developed and integrated into the nation's military services. However, two points of major importance stand out speculatively at the moment.

1. The Eisenhower administration has built its military-political policy toward Russia around the theory of massive retaliation. This doctrine, enunciated by Secretary of State Dulles several years ago, left loopholes for limited action but has been regarded all over the world as meaning that if the Communists launched an aggressive operation anywhere the United States response might take the form of a strike directly at Moscow. That of course would mean an all-out atomic conflict.

However, the massive retaliation policy was derived from the existence of an arsenal of atomic weapons of very great destructive capacity, capped by the hydrogen bomb. So long as thinking had to be conditioned by the existence of weapons of this type alone, it was believed that a nuclear war would be an all-out war and would be so costly as to be virtually unthinkable in any capital in the world.

Grandmother Still Missing On Pikes Peak

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Aug. 10 (AP)—Mrs. Ineslene Roberts of Colorado Springs, a great-grandmother 10 times, has had for years a passion for climbing mountains and couldn't see why she should stop just because she had reached 88.

She had climbed many of the nation's tallest peaks and trudged to the top of 14,110-foot Pikes Peak and back down again 14 times.

A week ago Mrs. Roberts left her daughter's home here for her 15th climb up Pikes Peak. She reached the top Sunday and started back down with a small.

Then all trace was lost.

Then all trace was lost.

All week experienced mountain men, including some of the state's best climbers, have searched for Mrs. Roberts. Small planes circled low over the slopes of the mountain.

Mountain trained troops from nearby Ft. Carson were called in to help.

Today Sheriff Earl Sullivan led a force of 100 men in another painstaking search across the face of the mountain. He fears Mrs. Roberts won't be found alive.

Comic Returns Fee To Jaycees After Budget Stretched

HOUSTON, Tex., Aug. 10 (AP)—Comedian Jerry Lewis has returned to the Junior Chamber of Commerce here the $10,000 he charged to be master of ceremonies at the Miss Houston pageant here last month.

Jaycee officials said Lewis returned $5,000 when he learned that the organization had overspent its budget in staging the elaborate affair.

Jerry Lewis' Wife Ailing, Show Halts

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 10 (AP)—Comedian Jerry Lewis flew in today from New York to be with his wife Patti, who is confined to her bed with premature labor pains.

The comedian, who arrived aboard an American Airlines plane drove directly from the airport to his wife's bedside at their home in suburban Pacific Palisades.

Lewis canceled a night club engagement at Wildwood, N.J., when his wife's obstetrician, Dr. Blake Watson, advised him to return to California.

Mrs. Lewis, who is expecting her fourth child in October, was reported resting comfortably.

EGG MACHINE

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (INS)—Con-operated fresh egg dispensers may soon become a common sight along the nation's roadways.

Economists at the Colorado A & M Experimental station are studying the advantages and disadvantages of the machines as far as the egg producer is concerned.
