THURSDAY.....APRIL 19, 1883

America and England.

It is a poor rule that will not work both ways. The British government thinks it right and proper to make representations to the American state department respecting changes which the British government thinks should be made in American laws in order to punish as crimes acts done in the United States to promote great changes in the political tie which binds Ireland to the British Crown. Very well! Is it not time asks the World, to make American counter "representations" to England respecting the long continuance of such a condition of affairs in London and in Dublin as is rapidly coming to be an international nuisance?

If there were any reasonable hope that the governing classes in England—Liberals or Conservatives, Whigs or Tories—could bring about peace and good government in Ireland, the United States might amicably agree to put up a while longer with these vexations and annoyances. But there really seems to be no hope of this. With few exceptions, the party leaders in the House of Commons talk and act about Irish affairs more like a lot of self-sufficient, arrogant, incapable and panic-stricken landlords than like thoughtful, able and deliberate legislators. What would the average Englishman say and do about such a condition of things in any other country as now exists and has so long existed in Ireland? What was there in the former condition of the Ionian Islands, or of Austrian Italy, or of Naples, or of the Papal States, or of Poland, to justify the interference of the British public, if not the British government, a counterpart of which cannot be found in the present relations between Ireland and the British Crown? Have not the United States as good a right to be impatient of the existing relations between Ireland and England as they had between 1868 and 1876 to be impatient of the relations between Cuba and Spain? Spain, however, succeeded in restoring order in Cuba. Is it not likely that these "representations" which Gladstone finds it necessery to make at Washington may before long put as severe a strain on the diplomacy of two powerful nations as did the Cuban discontent?

Pointers.

Southern journals call Ben. Butler "the last of the Puritans."

Freddie Gebhardt has four racers in training besides Mrs. Langtry.

A woman has been discovered in New York who receives babies that are not wanted and sells them at $5 or $10 apiece.

The debt of the United States less cash in the treasury, is $1,575,931,288. The decrease since June 30th is nearly $112,000,000.

So many logs have been cut and hauled this season in Maine that it is thought the mills will not be able to saw more than half of them.

The Cincinnatti Enquirer (Democratic) boasts that "its party cold nominate yellow dogs in that city this spring and elect every one of them by big majorities."

In New York 40,000 girls and women support themselves by their own labor, and 80,000 other women maintain themselves and their husbands by the work of their hands and brains.

Remark by Cardinal de Retz, which is as true now as when it was uttered: "A politician must often change his opinion if he wishes always to remain in the same party."

It has been estimated that the value of the products annually drawn from our forests exceeds $1,000,000,000, and of the vast imports of Great Britain two-thirds are said to be of vegetable character.

The Queen of England's crown is made up of diamonds, rubies, sapphires and emeralds set in a silver and gold body. It weighs 39 ounces and 5 pennyweights troy. In it there are 3,452 diamonds, 273 pearls, 9 rubies, 17 aspphires, and 11 emeralds.

The tendency of the time, as the Milwaukee Sentinel interprets it, is to the taxation of all enterprises which are not exclusively charitable. The public sentiment in opposition to tax exemption is growing stronger yearly, and we may rather expect to see the taxation of property now exempt than the further extension of the privilege of exemption.

The Springfield Republican urges the propriety of the adoption by Massachusetts, with some modification, of the English expedient of a permanent law office attached to the legislature, which shall have the oversight of the draft of all new legislation. All private bills and matters affecting private rights, especially in the British parliament, are subject to such scrutiny.

General J. W. Denver, who is mentioned as a possible Democratic candidate for president, was born in Virginia, went to Ohio, moved to Missouri, was a California pioneer, killed his man in a duel, went to congress, was appointed governor of Kansas by Buchanan, was made commissioner of Indian affairs, had a Colorado town (which became its capital) named after him, is rich, has a rich father-in-law, reads much history, and is sixty-five years old.

In some reminiscences of Daniel Boone by a writer in the Denver Tribune the following is said: "When he went back to his family in Virginia after roaming for two or three years, he found a baby in the house. Mrs. Boone, who had given him up for dead, hastened to explain that it belonged to his brother, who had been left in charge while Daniel went on his long hunt, and Daniel, glad to see them all, made no fuss about it, since it was 'a Boone anyhow,' and he gathered up the family, brother and all, and went on to Kentucky."

The most remarkable hail storm of the season is reported by the Hawkinsville (Ga.) Dispatch, although it must be kept in mind that the editor of that playful sheet is never under oath while writing. This hail storm had its rise and fall in Worth county, Ga., and stones of all sizes and shapes imaginable fell. It is said that a little boy found in his father's yard after the storm had ceased a hailstone that resembled a watch in every particular, having a perfect dial and the ring by which the chain is attached, and it was 3:30 o'clock by the hands when the boy picked it up. It is also stated that another one was found in a gentleman's yard that had the appearance in every way of of a two-year-old boy with a pistol in his hand, and that the pistol actually fired off and killed a fine fattening hog that had sought refuge in a fence corner near by.

Two years ago, according to the Boston Herald, a newspaper correspondent attempted to explore a Florida jungle in which is "De Debbil's Tar Kiln," a deep hole in the ground from which sulphurous vapors arise. Everybody in the neighborhood counted him as good as lost, except a dark-eyed Tallahassee girl. In a week he returned with scarce a rag to his back, almost blind and nearly dead from exhaustion. The negroes were all afraid of him, believing that no one could get out of there except by express permisson of "de ole bad man." The girl nursed and cared for him until he was able to return to his home in New York, where he finally recovered from the effects of the inhalations of sulphurous acid gas. The same train that bore David Davis to Fayetteville to be married carried Thomas Hodson on a similar mission to Palatka, where he met and was united to his Tallahassee girl in the same house where she nursed him back to life after his perilous adventure.

The N. Y. World thinks there must be something wrong in America when an Englishman can buy cotton in Galveston, carry it to England, manufacture it, bring the fabric back to Galveston, pay our enormous customs duties and undersell a rival American fabric in Texas?

Fishermen from Gloucester, Mass., are about to send out a committee of investigation to Alaska, in reference to establishing a halibut fishery in that territory.

The skill of Chinese in drawing plants as well as ladies' pedal extremities is well known. It is stated in a recent work on China that the ladies of the "upper ten" in the Celestial Empire wear in their bosom little fir trees, which by a carefully adjusted system of starvation have been reduced to the size of button-hole flowers. These remain fresh and evergreen in their dwarf state for a number of years, and are regarded as symbols of the perpetuity of love, to express which they are used by ladies of the highest rank.
