U. S. Trainers To Aid New W. Germany Army

ANDERNACH, Germany (AP)—The United States Monday launched its program of training assistance to speed the buildup of the new 500,000-man West German army.

Four officers and 24 enlisted men from the headquarters of the U.S. Army in Europe arrived to help train the cadre of the new Wehrmacht in the use of American equipment. Eight hundred German officers and men will take a three-month basic training course here and then become instructors for future battalions.

The U.S. Embassy in Bonn announced the first American weapons to be supplied under the U.S. military assistance program will be delivered to Andernach Tuesday. They will consist of several truckloads of pistols, rifles, bazookas, light machineguns and field signal equipment.
