Geisler On Witness Stand Relates Troubled Marriage Life, Claims Infidelities

By BUD BODINE
Staff Writer, News-Review

Laval Lloyd Geisler took the witness stand at his trial Friday afternoon and testified for three hours on his troubled marriage and what he described as infidelities of his late wife. Geisler, accused of committing first-degree murder in the death of his wife, Barbara Mae Geisler, last Jan. 29, steadily listed point after point during his testimony. He didn't spare details.

Geisler started his testimony with his arrival in Roseburg in 1946 when he came here to be with his sister following a fire at her house and the loss of her baby. From that point on, defense attorney Donald S. Kelley let the defendant tell his story.

Geisler said that his marriage was "not too good" at the start and that his wife was subject to "fits of anger" and was just generally "hard to get along with." He stated that friends would stop calling at their house because of "abusive language" used by his wife and that she "openly showed her availability to other men."

He testified he learned that his wife lied to him about her whereabouts, that he discovered she had been unfaithful to him and that the man with whom she had associated had admitted as much to him.

Geisler said that he had twice started to leave his wife but each time changed his mind, principally because of their three children. He stated that he "couldn't stand it without my children," and that after he begged his wife's forgiveness that she had accepted him back for the sake of the children.

She Didn't Care

Geisler reviewed the financial situation of the family. He told the court that he worked two shifts much of the time and then stated that after earning $7,000 in 1953 that he had to place a mortgage on the furniture in his home in order to pay income and property taxes in 1954. Geisler testified that he couldn't keep track of where the money went. He added that his wife told him that "she didn't care about the bills (facing the family), one way or the other."

Geisler also testified that when he attempted to close credit accounts at some downtown stores that Mrs. Geisler's parents opposed the move and reopened accounts in his wife's name. He added that he never was more than seven days without a job during his time here and that he had never had a vacation since coming to Oregon.

Psychiatrist Testifies

Dr. Gerhard Haugen, a Portland doctor and psychiatrist, was called by the defense to testify on the findings of his interview with Geisler on Feb. 15.

Dr. Haugen testified that Geisler's married life was filled with an "inordinate jealousy." He reviewed the defendant's condition, starting with "mild depressions" in September which he tried to cope with by being "extra busy" to "avoid free time and worrying about the situation."

Dr. Haugen pointed out the steady worsening of Geisler's situation culminating in crying spells in early January which included thoughts of suicide to get rid of his situation.

He said it was a case of "reactive depression."

In cross examination by Dist. Atty. Robert M. Stults, Dr. Haugen testified that homicides in connection with depressions of this sort are statistically rare.

In answer to another question by the district attorney, Dr. Haugen stated that Geisler was "capable of knowing what he was doing was wrong" when he shot his wife.

Courtroom Filled

The seats in the courtroom were completely filled Friday as in previous days. A spectator counted 77 women and 19 men in the courtroom during the afternoon session Friday.

Some refused to leave their seats during recesses for fear of losing them and some persons ate their lunches in the second floor corridor of the courthouse so as not to lose their seats in the afternoon session.

Earlier in the afternoon several more character witnesses were called by the defense along with Mrs. Oscar D. Means, Geisler's sister, and a neighbor, Mrs. Carol Gregory.

Mrs. Gregory testified that she had done baby sitting for Mrs. Geisler. She stated that Mrs. Geisler tried to make the Geisler children believe "that their father was going to hurt them."

Mrs. Gregory also told the court that Mrs. Geisler had told the defendant in her presence that "she would dine and dance any time she felt like it."

Garageman Testifies

In the late morning Wilbur R. Thompson, a garageman, testified that Mrs. Geisler had sworn at her children in his presence, and that he had heard her call her husband a profane name when she called at Thompson's business for her husband.

He said he had seen Geisler about 2:15 p.m. the afternoon before the shooting. He said the accused man looked like he had been crying, and was trying to borrow some money on some guns. Thompson said he refused the loan.

He described Geisler as "depressed," and said that in the 45 days before the shooting, Geisler had a "bad frame of mind."

Wayne R. Batton, who described himself as a former workmate of Geisler at a trucking firm, told the jury that he and his wife had quit visiting the Geislers because "I detest hearing someone run down all the time."

He added that "I never heard her (Mrs. Geisler) call the kids by their correct names."

Also on the stand was Carl Gregory, lead man and relief foreman at Evans Products Co., who described Geisler as "a good worker."

Nixon Believes U. S. Chances To Keep Bases Good

CASABLANCA, Morocco (AP) — Vice President Nixon said Saturday prospects are "extremely remote" that the United States will lose its rights to continue operating four giant air bases in Morocco.

Nixon, winding up his 24-hour stay in the capital city of Rabat, predicted "satisfactory arrangements will be made" in future negotiations with the Moroccan government.

Nixon made known his views at a news conference summing up two lengthy talks Friday with Sultan Mohammed V on the problem of future use of the bases and possible American economic aid.

Nixon said with obvious pleasure the Sultan "indicated his general approval" of President Eisenhower's doctrine of using American military might if necessary to guard the Middle East against communism. In words apparently aimed at congressional critics of the President's program Nixon emphasized that the Sultan thought the economic phase of the program even more important than its military phase.

The U. S. Air Force now operates the huge air bases, which are capable of handling the biggest jet bombers, under a lease arrangement negotiated in 1951 with the French government when it ruled Morocco. Since gaining independence a year ago the Moroccan government has been insisting the United States negotiate a new base agreement directly with it.

Nixon, continuing his African tour, arrived Saturday from Rabat.

Texas Legislator Faces Indictment

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — James C. Cox, a member of the Texas House of Representatives, was indicted yesterday by the Travis County grand jury of "unlawfully, willfully and corruptly" agreeing to accept a $5,000 bribe from Dr. Howard Harmon.

Cox has filed countercharges against Harmon.

The 36-year-old Conroe, Tex., lawmaker was charged with agreeing to use his influence to kill a bill which, in effect, would have outlawed the practice of naturopathy in Texas. The indictment accused Cox of agreeing to accept the money from Harmon, of San Antonio, president of the Texas Naturopathic Physicians Assn.

The grand jury action came while a Texas House of Representatives committee conducted its own investigation.

The indictment alleged that on Feb. 20 Cox agreed to accept the money with the understanding the "work of the said James C. Cox would be given and rendered to defeat the passage of HB274." House bill 274 was a proposed act that would have outlawed the practice of naturopathy in the state.

Pope Pius Marks 81st Birthday With Greetings

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Pius XII marked his 81st birthday totoday. Messages of greeting poured in from all over the world.

Today also was the 18th anniversary of his election as head of the Roman Catholic Church.

Early this morning Rome residents and tourists began gathering in St. Peter's Square to hail the pontiff. At the Vatican and on Vatican buildings thoughout Rome, gold and white papal flags were flown in observance of the occasion.

For the pope himself, the double anniversary was little different than any other of his work days.

North Carolina Ends Perfect Regular Season

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

They're not just a-whistlin' Dixie down in North Carolina today. They're shouting it from the rooftops, loud and clear.

The reason for the waving of the Stars and Bars? The University of North Carolina's basketball team, naturally. The Tar Heels, ranked first in the nation, swept through their regularly - scheduled 24 - game season undefeated. It was the first such season since 1924.

Victim No. 24 tumbled last night when Duke lost to the McGuiremen in an Atlantic Coast Conference spine-tingler, 86-72.

against him" and caused one of them to ask, "You do love us, don't you Daddy?" At this point Geisler broke down.

The second time the defendant cried during his testimony was when he described turning his dog over to the county humane society after his wife had told him "to get rid of that mutt."

During the month Geisler pointed out that a pattern developed in his wife's actions in that she would go out on Thursday and Saturday nights. He testified that his wife would say that she had been at her mothers.

Geisler stated that his wife had told him that "he didn't have any right to question where she had been."

"Things began to spin in my mind," Geisler added, "between constant lying to me, the other incidents going on and I started to worry."

He indicated that it got worse in the days preceding the shooting.

21 Jackson County Liquor Outlets Closed

PORTLAND (AP) — Twenty-one liquor and beer outlets in the Jackson County area Friday were ordered to close for seven days.

The Oregon Liquor Control Commission, in announcing the order, said the operators had made contributions in the recent political campaign. That violated state law.

Morgan Links Bribe Offer To Beck, Brewster

conducting a search for evidence of underworld influence in labor and industry, currently is concentrating on the situation in Portland, Ore.

Morgan testified he was told last September by Manton Spear, Portland beer distributor, that the teamsters were willing to pay $10,000 into the campaign fund of Democratic gubernatorial nominee Robert Holmes to get one of their members or somebody else "acceptable" to them named to the state liquor commission.

Morgan said he turned down the idea, and that Holmes indignantly did likewise. Holmes was elected governor in November.

Morgan said Spear told him "Beck and Brewster were the source" of the alleged scheme. He said Spear informed him the teamsters wanted to be able to block any state liquor purchases of brands made by eastern distilleries having labor troubles with the teamsters. All retail liquor sales in Oregon are made by the state.

Spear denied mentioning any $10,000 figure to Morgan. But he conceded, under questioning he must have mentioned that "the union would contribute" in an effort to get a man on the liquor commission. He recalled having spoken to Morgan of the plan to block state purchases of certain brand liquors.

Spear denied having mentioned the names of Beck or Brewster, but said he was associated in the beer business with Dave Beck Jr., son of the Teamsters' national president.

Morgan said that when he met Spear it was as an emissary of Holmes. Morgan said Holmes needed money for his campaign and had heard of a possible political contribution.

Morgan also said that Thomas Maloney, a Seattle gambler described as having considerable teamsters influence in Portland, tried to get him to have a liquor commission investigation called off. Morgan quoted Maloney as saying the then Republican Gov. Paul Patterson "is our pigeon and we don't want anybody shooting at him."

Holmes, although opposed by the teamsters, defeated Patterson's GOP successor, Gov. Elmo Smith, in last fall's election.

Hearing Chairman Declares Either Sinatra Or Private Eye Committed Perjury

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The hearing on scandal magazine was "loaded with perjury," the chairman says, declaring the main example was conflicting testimony of Frank Sinatra and a private eye.

A transcript of the three days of testimony will be typed and ready for the county grand jury by Tuesday, state Sen. Fred Kraft told a district attorney's representative who inquired about it yesterday.

This was shortly after Kraft had adjourned the state Senate committee hearings, saying:

"We have only hit the high lights and merely scratched the surface of a field rampant with abuse. Clearly these hearings have shown the great void of regulation and control — and the crying need that this be remedied."

The senators sought information on bill collectors, debt adjusters and private detectives — including whether the latter sell their information to scandal magazines. The committee will recommend legislation.

Kraft, outside the hearing room, told a reporter:

"There are a lot of perjury in there. Besides Sinatra and the other man" — a reference to conflicting testimony of the crooner and the private detective — "there was a lot more. It was loaded with perjury."

The two men's conflicting testimony concerned the "wrong door" raid aimed at Marilyn Monroe the night of Nov. 5, 1954, in a Hollywood apartment. It occurred two weeks after she obtained a divorce from former baseball Joe DiMaggio.

Sinatra testified Monday that he drove the former New York Yankees slugger from a Hollywood restaurant to the vicinity of an apartment near which Marilyn's car was parked. He testified he stayed in his car during a raid that proved to be on another woman's apartment.

Private detective Philip Irwin listened to the crooner's testimony, then took th stand and said almost all of Sinatra's statements were false. He said the crooner joined himself, DiMaggio, another private detective and three other men in entering the apartment after the other detective kicked in the door.

"Someone — I think it was Mr. Sinatra — turned on the lamp," Irwin testified. "Some one yelled it was the wrong apartment. There was a scramble for the door."

been done about the many other bills for re-organization of the various phases of the state government.

Power: The House-passed memorial asking Congress to build a federal high dam in Hells Canyon will be considered by the Senate next week. The outcome is in doubt because of the 15-15 party split in the upper house.

Development: There has been no action on the governor's proposal to create a state development department.

Welfare: The Senate Public Health Committee is trying to figure out what it would cost the state if the relative responsibility law is repealed. Until that answer comes, there will be no action on bills to repeal or amend it.

Elections: The principal election reform bill, prepared after a long interim study, was introduced this week. Since it's the longest bill ever introduced, action on it is weeks away.

Veterans: The maximum $600 bonus for veterans of the Korean War still is in the House Military Affairs Committee. Both houses have voted to extend educational aid to World War II veterans until June 30, 1959. The memorial asking Congress for a pension for World War I veterans died in committee this week.

Burglary Ring Broken Up With Arrests Here

ing and larceny from an automobile.

In addition to titling himself leader of the Moonlighters, Evans is a self-styled Pachuco and has decorated his left hand with crude tatoos. Also, he says he is a member of the Portland Broadway gang which he used as a model for his little mob.

Evans was brought into district court Friday for arraignment on the two charges but his case was ordered continued until Monday when he asked Judge Warren Woodruff for a court-appointed attorney. He admitted to the judge that he was serving a 30-day sentence for petty larceny and said he had 18 days left on that term.

Evans told a News-Review reporter he had joined the Broadway gang about a year ago and said there were from 40 to 50 members. He admitted he hadn't lived in Portland for any length of time but was "up there a lot." This was confirmed by officers who investigated the cases.

He said a prospective member of the Moonlighters had to "pull off a job and get away with it" to gain membership. This initiation was patterned after the Broadway gang, he confirmed.

Evans talked freely about his activities and past record. He said he had been arrested by Roseburg police for disorderly conduct and had received a three-day sentence and $20 fine. He also told of an arrest in 1955 for extortion but said he had served no time.

The arrests and story of the investigation were announced Thursday by State Police Sgt. Robert Keefe and Sheriff Ira Byrd. Working under their direction and charged with the actual investigation were Larry Wright, chief criminal deputy sheriff, and W. H. McCullum, state police officer.

During the course of this investigation, the officers learned of four other burglaries they said were admitted by Emert, who previously had confessed to 38 burglaries in the Winston, Green and Winston Section area.

The officers said Emert had recited a list of larcenies which sounds like a tour of the United States with a foray into Canada. These ranged from Washington state to Florida, New England, Canada, Colorado to the West Coast.

The Moonlighters didn't seem to net much cash for their work. Wright and McCullum said the trio had taken a commercial storage battery from a Thunder Mountain Logging operation. This item, weighing 162 pounds and valued at $110, they sold for $4.50. From another tool shed in the same area, according to the officers, the gang took two gasoline engines, one of them worth $250, and sold them for $1.50 as scrap.

Other loot brought similar small amounts when sold. Auto accessories were a major target for all but Emert who concentrated on cash. Gasoline, oil, tires, hub caps, a gas mask and a wide assortment of articles were taken throughout the area. The majority of the stolen goods had been recovered, the investigating officers said.

Sutherlin City Manager Gives Critics Answer

C. Dean Smith, Sutherlin city manager, said at a recent city council meeting persons from the area who applied for the job of water superintendent didn't have the necessary qualifications when he drew criticism for importing someone for the position.

Criticism was also aimed at the Sutherlin city recorder, water and street department. The position of city recorder came snder fire when criticism was voiced concerning the subject of discharging Mrs. Ida Lehman, present city recorder. Mayor Claude Kesner told the council that differences had come up between the recorder and Smith.

Kesner went on to say that the differences between the two had been settled for the present. He said he was not sure how long the present arrangement would last, but felt the city had done what was right.

Don Curry questioned the way employes of the water and street department were doing their work. He also brought up the question of a short working day for the street crews.

Bloodless Revolt Hits Indonesia

By JAMES WILDE

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — A bloodless revolt flared Saturday in east Indonesia along a pattern set last December in Sumatra, in the west.

Greater autonomy is the main demand of 51 leaders of the eastern islands who proclaimed the coup, just as it was in the abortive uprisings in Sumatra.

A new factor appeared, however, in widespread opposition to President Sukarno's recently proclaimed plan to give the Communists a voice in governmental councils of this predominantly Moslem nation.

The revolutionists announced at 3 a.m. they had installed the governor of the Celebes, A.P. Pettarani, as military governor of all East Indonesia — taking in the Celebes, Moluccas and the lesser Sunda Islands. They reported the "takeover of the civilian administration shall be done quickly."

"May God Bless Us," the declaration said.

Lt. Col. Ventje Sumual, 35, was identified as the leader of the revolt. He proclaimed a state of war and siege.

The rebel chieftain is a handsome former bodyguard of Sukarno and guerrilla fighter during the revolution against the Dutch. The president has regarded him as a son. A Christian born in the Philippines, Sumual once served as a sergeant in the Dutch army.

Though critics of the central government, seated in this Java city under Premier Ali Sastroamidjojo, the revolutionists made it clear they did not wish to break away from the Republic of Indonesia.

Marine Drill Instructor Cleared Of All Charges

PARRIS ISLAND, S. C. (AP) — A Marine drill instructor charged with mistreating recruits at this basic training center was cleared of all charges here Friday. One recruit said he considered the mistreatment involving him as something of a joke.

Sgt. Daniel U. Corey, 23, of Somerville, Mass., was charged with forcing Pvt. John L. Barone, 18, of Chester, Pa., to stuff candy into his mouth until Barone became ill.

Corey also was accused of pushing Pvt. Thomas Hayes, 19, of Lawrence, Mass., to the floor of a barracks.

The summary court-martial was the third trial here during the week of drill instructors charged with mistreating recruits. A fourth trial is to be held next week.

Barone testified he ate two candy bars with Sgt. Corey's permission, but started laughing and became choked.

FORMER RESIDENT DIES

Joseph Wheeler Harris, 58, former resident of Roseburg, died recently at his home in Marysville, Calif.

Harris, a carpenter by trade, was a native of Birmingham, Ala., and had been a resident of Marysville for the past eight years. Harris and his wife moved to Marysville eight years ago, because of Mr. Harris' health.

Mrs. Heiner Speech Winner

Mrs. Ruth Heiner was awarded first place with a speech, entitled "Jericho Road," in the Roseburg Toastmistress Club speech contest held Tuesday at the Swedish Dining room.

She will compete in a council speech contest in Camas Valley March 10, with contestants from Camas Valley and Winston-Dillard.

Second place winner was Maple Lyon, whose speech was entitled "Hidden Treasures." Nell Morgan won third place with "Let Freedom Ring." Other speakers and titles were: Mary Benedict, "Idle Hands"; and Emma Manning, "Your Prayers are Always Answered."

Guests present were: Cleta Callahan, Mrs. O. Ledgerwood, Mrs. Roy Gordon and Mrs. O. D. McAllister of the Winston-Dillard Toastmistress Club; Bonnie Stone and Mrs. Ken Armson of Roseburg, and Mrs. Lucille Roughcore of San Diego, Calif., formerly of Roseburg.

Celia Day served as speech contest chairman and toastmistress of the evening.

Emergency State Seen In Bangkok

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Premier P. Pibulsonggram today declared a state of emergency — a step short of martial law — to cope with disorders anticipated in the wake of Tuesday's hotely contested election.

Airplane passengers arriving in Singapore from Bangkok said Thailand's army and navy were feuding over the results of the election but that there had been no violence up to noon today.

The U.S. Embassy in Bangkok reported to the State Department in Washington there were "student demonstrations and unrest" in the Thai capital.

Troops guarded all public buildings as students from Chulongkorn and Thamasart Universities were reported planning mass demonstrations.

Lions Light Bulb Sales Plans Are Announced

Plans for their annual sale of electric light bulbs the night of March 7 were announced to Roseburg Lions Club members this week by Chairman John Lossley. The club members will meet that night for a dutch lunch at the County Parks Dept. building, where the bulbs are stored, then will canvass the town for their sales. The town will be divided into grids for easy coverage.

The Lions last Thursday entertained their children at dinner. The program consisted of accordion selections by Mrs. John LeDuc's accordion band and piano selections by Perry Edie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Edie. Also shown was a motion picture, "Family Afoot in the Yukon."
