FIRST AID FOR FROSTBITE

Come now, gather round, children, and we'll endeavor to work out a sensible way to treat frostbite. I've never lived farther north than Canandaigua but I know a fellow who lived five years in the arctic and I think he knows more about first aid for frostbite than anybody else. He told me about it after he returned home. Another thing he told me was that neither he nor any member of his party ever had anything you mollycoddles could call a "cold," although they endured more exposure to cold and wet than even our hot stove philosophers have experienced. Don't try to brush this off by explaining that of course my friend and his party were "hardened" to it, for the truth is that "we had been infected as soon as we reached Cape Bathhurst and repeatedly during the fall we 'caught cold' afresh from coming to some new settlement of whites or Eskimos. I caught one of these colds while at the house of . . . the Hudson's Bay Company's trader in the delta . . ." (quoted from Stefansson's The Friendly Arctic).

Dr. Brady

Now I can't remember whether it was in his book or in conversation that Vilhjalmur (I've known him thirty years but I still don't know how to spell or pronounce his name).

Stefansson told me this, but anyway he made light of the question of frostbite. Just warm your hand under your armpit and hold it on nose or cheek for a moment, then the same with the other hand. Or for frostbitten fingers, hold in the armpit for warmth and gently wash the dry hands for a moment, repeat the warming and "washing" till color returns to the blanched skin.

Never apply ice or cold in any form. DON'T RUB the frostbitten part. Just knead it gently.

It is well to bear in mind that overzealous first aid treatment may do more harm than good. To continue any active treatment after color returns to the blanched, whitened frostbitten finger, nose, ear, cheek, foot or toe is to invite infection and inflamation.

Salem—(U.P.)—The State civil defense advisory committee will meet here Thursday to hear a talk on "war and civil defense" by Maj. Gen. John Hargreaves, emergency medical chief for the Oregon civil defense agency.

Washington—(U.P.)— President Eisenhower has nominated Joseph F. Finnegan of New York to be director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

Shuttles used in textile weaving are manufactured from wood of the Pacific madrone.

Heading a story about Liberace, a TV magazine says, "Stop kicking this guy around!"

Shucks, we'd planned on giving him just one more little kick in the shins before we stopped.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Kumquats

Ben Told kumquats are rich in iodine, especially when one eats about ten a day. Are the other citrus fruits of the same value? (G. G.)

Answer—All citrus fruits are of the same value, but none contains enough iodin to fulfill the body's requirement. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope and ask for pamphlet THE IODIN RATION, which tells how to insure the daily intake of the iodin which every man, woman, child, sheep, cow, pig, cat, dog, chicken, horse, sheep and canary must get to thrive well.

Not in a Health Column

I have been a reader for years but I cannot recall having seen anything about ——— (a disease) in your column. Please give your opinion and advice about it . . . (A. J.)

Answer—Can't do it without flouting the Hippocratic injunction: Do Good If You Can But Do No Harm.
