New Jersey Hopes For Paradise Chilled

New Brunswick, N.J.—(U.P.)—Two Rutgers University meteorologists have chilled hopes of New Jerseyites that climate changes on the North American continent eventually might transform the state into a tropic paradise.

A. Vaugh Havens and W. E. Marlatt said a continuing study of state-wide weather records fails to bear out predictions of whether prophets that, what with the climate supposedly growing warmer yearly, the Garden State may be on its way to adding palms and frangipani to the landscape.

In fact, reported Havens and Marlatt, New Jersey's climate actually may be taking a slight turn for the cooler.

For evidence, they cited records for the first half of 1956 showing an average temperature of a chill 47 degrees, one degree lower than the 1955 figure and about average for the last 80 years. Twenty inches of rain fell during the six-month 1956 period, six inches more than last year and half-an-inch above the 80-year average.

As for the annual snowfall, Havens and Marlatt say there will be a big market in New Jersey for galoshes and cold remedies for a long time to come.

2. In addition to the bonds heretofore or otherwise authorized by this Charter, the City Council of the City of Medford is hereby authorized to borrow money on the faith of the said city and for that purpose issue general obligation bonds of the City of Medford in the amount of $220,000.00 to obtain funds with which to establish and construct said system of arterial streets in the City of Medford, and, in connection therewith, to acquire such real property, and interest therein, as shall be necessary to establish, widen and extend public streets in, and as part of, said arterial street system.
