Conductor "Bob" Grubb is now handling the Portland-Astoria local freight train. During the summer he was on the through passenger run, and when the beach trains were taken off his "seniority" allowed him to bid in a run. He bid for the local not realizing that he was getting a real workingman's job. The first day of his new run found Grubb with an extra heavy freight train and it took about 14½ hours to make the Astoria freight yard. This is quite a contrast to the 3½ hour run to Seaside on the limited and the opportunity to be the center of attraction of admiring Seaside maids. Agent Gilby opines that next time Grubb has a chance to use his "seniority" he will give the matter due consideration.
