School Guard Cost Reported

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A source close to Gov. Orval Faubus today estimated that the federal government spent $3,436,000 to keep troops on duty here for the first six weeks of enforced integration at Central High School.

Faubus and the government are on opposite sides in the controversy over the presence of the troops.

The source, who refused to be identified, said that his figures were based on the first 38 days after the arrival of units of the 101st Airborne Division Sept. 24.

Only federalized Arkansas National Guardsmen now are at the scene, where nine Negro children are attending school with about 1,900 white pupils under a federal court order.

About 225 paratroopers still are stationed here but the Army has announced that they will be returned Nov. 27 to their base at Ft. Campbell, Ky.

The estimate indicated that the federal government spent more than $90,000 per day.

The Army has cut the payroll sharply by releasing most of the federalized guardsmen.

A short time after the arrival of federal troops the Army said it was spending $95,000 per day. At that time 10,800 guardsmen were under federal control and were receiving full-time pay. Most of them also were receiving rations and allowances.
