THE DUTY OF A CITIZEN.

Political parties are but means to an end. They exist for the purpose of advocating certain views their members believe to be essential to the welfare of the country. Allegiance to them should be based upon this proposition, and not upon past technical predictions. The man who honestly believes he has never voted any ticket but one, and that he never intends to change, has certainly not attained the highest ideal free citizenship; however his declaration may meet the applause of political fanatics. Party allegiance that is based upon assumption of infallibility is incompatible with clear mental vision, and those who practice it are but the zealous partisans who care nothing for the settlement of any of our great political problems, "Too much not," says the Southern statesman, "time for reasonable protection for the manufacturing industries of the South, because of fear of negro domination." "Too much not," says the Northern statesman, "attempt to secure any reduction in the tariff, for fear the soldiers would lose their pensions;" and so the Northern and Southern legislator stand between the reasonable men in both parties and hold them apart. What, then, is the duty of a citizen? Neither party is ideal, nor ever will be. Schemers and grafters abound in both, and ever will. Yet one or the other of the two great parties will continue to control the political destinies of the country, and he who acts with either of the smaller groups is losing his full influence. Is it not, then, the duty of every citizen to cease voting on technicalities, and to carefully take the general principles of the two great parties, with the honest purpose of determining the effect the application of those principles will place upon the material prosperity of the country, and especially upon this Oregon of ours. "Let the dead past bury its dead." Retrospection and recrimination will accomplish nothing. The Oregon Historical Society will attend to the preservation of the archives. It is the duty of the living men of Oregon to live in the political present, studying carefully the issues presented, in order that they may vote intelligently. The ticket of the party that comes the nearest to advocating their ideas of good government.

The death of Ed. Lamb, an employe of the State Printing Office at Salem, will cause a widespread and more sincere grief than that of many more prominent men who have achieved what the world terms success. Wherever printers gather together it will be said there is a good man gone; a good little man, with a good heart that was quick to respond to the appeal of charity, and not too nice in discriminating as to the worth of the applicant. It is safe to say that few members of the fraternity were more widely known and more highly esteemed. In early years Ed. was a tobacconist, and worked in all the great cities of the country, but for a number of years past he has resided in Salem, and was one of that community's honored citizens. The editor of the Mist will ever have a warm recollection of his many good qualities.

If the Mist were published daily it would contain in each issue a short editorial advising the Republicans of this county to hold their primaries this year under the direct nominating system, thereby permitting the voters to nominate the candidates whom they are expected to support in the coming campaign. It is time, for the good of the party, that the people, instead of the bosses, both nominate and elect the ticket. Columbia County has good officials. We believe they are all honest and painstaking, and no attack will be made upon their records by this paper. But this is a Republican county, and there is no good reason why competent Republicans should not be nominated and elected. This paper hopes to see a contest upon the principle of the two great parties, and not upon personal or factional issues. The way to secure this, and the only way, is to nominate the county ticket at the primaries. Let the discussion of the merits of candidates be thorough, and then, when the nominations are made, the practically unanimous support of the party will be given to the ticket so nominated.

There are not many hop plantations in Columbia County, yet it seems that they do well in the Nehalem Valley, where land is cheap. Contracts can now be made at twenty cents per pound, and that is big money for hops, leaving a profit to the grower of about thirteen cents per pound. During the picking season hops sold as high as twenty-nine cents per pound, and men got comparatively rich on one year's crop in the great hop-raising counties of the Willamette Valley.

What is the matter with our farmers in Oregon? The Homestead says that six hundred thousand dozen eggs were shipped into Portland, Oregon, from the East during 1903, all of which were consumed in that city. Remember that Portland also consumed many thousand dozen eggs besides, which were produced on the Pacific slope. Oregon farmers should have sold every one of those eggs, from their own farms, and shipped as many more to Idaho and San Francisco.

The Great Success of the Brownsville Woolen Mills

Is largely due to the honest treatment given their customers and also to the superior quality of pure wool goods manufactured from the best Oregon wool, and sold at less price than other stores ask for shoddy and cotton mixed goods.

We want the trade of people tributary to Portland, and will guarantee a saving of at least $5.00 on a good suit of clotnes.

ARE LAW ABIDING.

Mr. Ogden Courtesondy Defends the Christian Scientists.

PORTLAND, Feb. 20, 1904.

ED MIST: I desire to thank you for the space accorded my communication in the last issue of your esteemed paper, and would seek your further indulgence for a word or two in consideration of your kindly comment. While Christian Science, by reason of its teaching and healthy growing application to the lives of its adherents, may rather "use abandonment of medicine" as a basic all means of relief from disease, this doctrine does not sanction or propose the "closing in of the lazar of the house in cases of infectious disease. Christian Scientists, in respect for the right of their fellow men, are found rather more than usually observant of the health regulations of their communities, in that their religion teaches the earnest fulfilment of the golden rule. That they are cheerfully and literally obedient to legal enactments relative to contagion, quarantine, etc., is attested by their conduct in every community, and as an evidence of this the following testimony of Dr. Emerson, president of the Health Department of New York, given in an interview in the New York Press, is practical and to the point:

"I have been informed that there are upwards of 80,000 of the fraternity in this country, and since I have been at the head of the Health Department I have received no proof of a violation of law, or the rules of the sanitary code by a Christian Scientist. I know they are good citizens, and good cases are reported to me," a stage taking the necessary precautions of phone, telegraph and messenger boy. Violations are promptly prosecuted, but I make yet to find an instance where the law breaker was a Christian Scientist. I am not making a defense of Christian Science, but as long as they conform to the rules of the department they are no worse than any other citizens."
