STARTS FIFTH SEASON

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Giants have signed handyman Joe Morrison for his fifth season in the National Football League. Morrison plays both offensive and defensive back and fills in at several positions.

Coach Awarded 12 Cents

NEW YORK (UPI)—Basketball coach James McGregor of Portland, Ore., who sued secretary Daniel J. Ferris of the Amateur Athletic Union for $750,000 for "damaging his reputation" Friday was awarded a total of 12 cents in federal court.

The award, by a 10-man and two-woman jury that heard evidence for four days, was broken down into six cents compensatory damages and six cents punitive damages.

McGregor charged in the suit filed in February 1960 that Ferris had damaged his reputation by a letter Ferris wrote to Swedish basketball officials whose team McGregor was coaching at the time.

McGregor charged that he had planned to bring the Swedish team on a tour of the United States but Ferris wrote the Swedish officials that the AAU could not approve the tour because it had been arranged by a "professional promoter" and that McGregor was "in disrepute" in this country.

Barrett G. Kreisberg, attorney for McGregor, asserted that this letter damaged McGregor's reputation as a coach although he had previously coached basketball teams in Italy, Austria and Turkey.

The AAU originally had been included in the suit as a defendant but were ordered deleted by Federal Judge Richard H. Levit, who presided at the trial.

MacArthur Lays Down Law To Units

NEW YORK (UPI) — General Douglas MacArthur had to "lay the law down" but the United States finally seemed assured today of presenting its best track and field team against Russia at Moscow next month.

Stripping aside all diplomacy, the 83-year-old general who had been personally selected by President Kennedy to settle the differences between the Amateur Athletic Union and National Collegiate Athletic Association, issued his decision in cold, blunt terms understand.

MacArthur emphasized "this decision is final" and it caused the Track and Field Federation (USTFF) finally to yield to the AAU.

Specifically, MacArthur told the USTFF "as clearly as I can make use of the English language" that the AAU is the sole sanctioning power for open track meets.

That includes the National AAU championships at St. Louis, June 21-22, and the general warned the USTFF not to interfere with "free participation" in any AAU-sponsored event.

It marked the third time this week MacArthur had to explain his position to the college group and he left little doubt he was annoyed.

In the face of MacArthur's diktum, the USTFF finally agreed not to bar any athletes under its jurisdiction from AAU-sponsored meets.

Prior to the USTFF's capitulation, several other affiliated groups of the NCAA had sought to prevent college athletes under their jurisdiction from taking part in the AAU championships, from which the teams to compete in the dual-meet against Russia will be chosen.

Surface Angling For Mackinaw Good At Crescent

By MILT GUYMON
Oregon Game Commission

Have you ever caught a mackinaw trout? Would you like to try it on light gear and enjoy a strong battling fish that will test your angling skill to the limit? If you would, and we don't know anyone who wouldn't, lend an ear, for this great fishery is available if you have a little time and the inclination.

It may be a little late this year, but anglers might keep this great sport fishery in mind when next spring rolls around. For it's an early spring show—a time of year when these big, deep-dwelling lake trout are available to anglers right up on top of the water.

And this spring surface angling for mackinaw is beginning to catch on especially at Crescent lake, where the normal deep troll method used during the summer season has been relatively unproductive. The big lakers are there, but it is only on rare occasions that anglers using the deep troll method report in with good catches. Because of this reluctance on the part of lake trout at Crescent to hit, anglers have stuck pretty close to fishing for rainbow trout or kokanee.

But now a new kind of lake trout fishing is catching on—that of casting from the shore line during the early spring period. Boat anglers are also taking the big mackinaw on shallow troll. And it's proving to be a real fishing experience for those anglers giving it a try.

We recommended this early spring method of taking mackinaw trout several years ago, but don't know if someone took our word to heart or just accidentally stumbled onto it on his own. Perhaps the angler who gave it a first-time try at Crescent was an "old namycush" fisherman from northern Minnesota or one of the Canadian provinces. Nevertheless a few anglers caught on and more anglers are giving it a try as they, too, learn more about the habits of lake trout.

We can only recommend this type of mackinaw angling in early spring. At other times it will be about as unproductive as plunking for sturgeon in a goldfish pool. The best fishing will be from the time the ice breaks until the upper surface water begins to warm. The nearer you can fish to the ice breakup, the better your chances of success.

At this time, a period which may last two to three weeks, the big trout will appear near the surface and can be readily taken on a variety of flashing lures and wobblers. When the surface water begins to warm, these fish head for the cold water depths and there they remain until the winter months when water near the surface again reaches a desirable temperature.

During the summer months, then, the only way to take mackinaw trout is with the use of weighted lines and heavy lead in order to reach down 100 feet or more into the mackinaw's cold water home. Although many lake trout are taken in this fashion, we have never relished horsing a pound or more of lead up from the bottom, plus a fish that loses fight quickly against the unyielding drag of the weight.

However, it is during his spring sojourn near the surface that this big trout really shows his worth. He is vibrant with energy and will fight to the last breath of exhaustion. He's hungry, too, and woe to any minnow or to anything else that looks like food that gets in his way. His strike is savage, an arm-jarring experience to the angler that continues to the end. He is not spectacular, such as the rainbow, but for sheer tenacity, bulldog in fighting, and rollicking, spirited runs, "old namycush" is a front runner in the trout family.

At Crescent Lake this spring, casting from the shore with wobbling and flashing lures produced excellent catches of lake trout. Of the many mackinaw taken, one weighed in at 24 pounds. Most of the fish landed ranged in the five to eight-pound class. According to our information, the best time to fish for mackinaw is when a strong west wind is blowing causing the lake to be quite rough at the northeast end.

Many years ago in northern Minnesota, we also found windy days producing the best lake trout angling. In addition, top angling was had immediately as the ice broke. Many times enterprising anglers would use outboard motor boats to break up honeycomb ice if there was no open water in which to cast. In that country "ice out" meant mackinaw fishin, and an open shore line was all that was needed to send anglers hurrying to favorite lakes.

We haven't heard of anglers trying their luck surface casting for mackinaw at Odell or Big Cultus lakes, but we are sure this great sport fishery is available here as well as other lakes where mackinaw are present. The early spring surfacing of "namycush" is a characteristic wherever he may be.

We certainly suggest a try by some enterprising angler who likes to experiment a bit.

Hunting Times Changed

PORTLAND (UPI) — The State Game Commission Friday set Oregon's general deer season from Sept. 28 through Oct. 30.

The commission followed closely its tentative regulations adopted two weeks ago in setting final seasons and bag limits on the state's big game.

Members had considered testimony ranging from an appeal for closure of all deer hunting to wide-open seasons.

As in the past, hunters will be restricted to bucks with forked horns west of the Cascades and bucks with visible antlers in eastern Oregon during the general season.

The unit permit season for taking anterless deer will run from Oct. 12 through Oct. 20, one week shorter than last year's season. The commission reduced the number of doe permits to 97,330, making most of the cuts in southeastern Oregon, where a low fawn production has been reported.

An early buck season was approved in the high Cascades, the Minam area and the Waldport-Mapleton area. Fifteen extended hunts also are scheduled for hunters with unit permits who have not used their deer tags.

The general elk season will run from Oct. 26 through Nov. 11 in the Coast Range and Oct. 26 through Nov. 24 in the rest of the state. The antelope season is scheduled Aug. 17-21.

The Clatsop, Wilson, Trask and Tioga elk units will be hunted only on a permit basis. Antlerless elk hunts also are scheduled in northeastern Oregon with 3,200 permits to be issued.

A total of 650 antelope tags will be issued this year, 50 more than last year. The Interstate unit and the south portion of the Klamath game management unit will be opened to antelope hunting this year in addition to the six regular units.

The commission said a synopsis of the 1963 big game regulations will be available to hunters early in July.

Jean Saubert Will Compete

PORTLAND (UPI) — Two of America's best women skiers have indicated they will compete in the Golden Rose Slalom competition at Mt. Hood June 16.

Jean Saubert of Lakeview announced Friday she will be in the race. Miss Saubert said Linda Meyers, Mammoth Mountain, Calif., probably will accompany her. Both are prospects for the U.S. team in the 1964 Winter Olympics.
