Khrushchev Stands Alone On JFK Conference List

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

It is an odd twist of international politics that at this particular moment about the only major European leader with whom the President of the United States can deal is the premier of the Communist Soviet Union.

Such is the state of disarray among the United States' nominal allies that permanent agreement presently is not possible with Britain, West Germany or Italy.

President Charles de Gaulle of France, with veto power in the European Common Market and determined to pursue his own independent nuclear policy, completes the allied picture of confusion, uncertainty and irritation.

Aside from De Gaulle, the one figure representing a degree of permanency is Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev.

This special importance is attached to the U. S.-U.S.S.R. agreement on a so-called "hot line" to run between the Kennedy and Khrushchev desks as a step to prevent war either through miscalculation or misunderstanding.

Negative Agreement

Since it represents neither progress on disarmament nor on nuclear inspection, it is at best a negative agreement, demonstrating primarily that neither the United States nor the present leadership of the Soviet Union seeks or wants a war.

Yet in Western Europe where U.S. interests chiefly lie, there are problems desperately needing solution, ranging from the Common Market to questions of trade with the Communist bloc and Western defenses.

British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan's government is scandal rocked and there are reports that he may save himself now only on a promise to resign before the end of summer.

Confidently standing in the wings waiting to take over is Socialist Harold Wilson, just back from talks with Khrushchev in Moscow. With him he brought a Russian proposal to buy from Britain a $280 million oil refinery.

Want Steel Outlet

British industry also is interested in supplying the Russians with steel for a huge oil pipeline, as are the West Germans.

Both fall within the U. S. concept of stategic goods banned from the Communists by allied agreement.

Both are sources of conflict not only with the United States but between the British and Germans as well.

De Gaulle's veto of British membership in the Common Market has left the nations of Western Europe farther apart politically than before the market's inception.

The smaller nations resent De Gaulle's high-handed actions and fear that the inward-looking market forced upon them by France may lead both to U. S. retaliation and an increasing lack of U. S. interest in the fate of Europe.

For the final outcome much will depend upon the still untried leadership of Ludwig Erhard, presently tabbed as successor to Chancellor Konrad Adenauer.

Italy also presents special problems. There also, Moro is attempting to set up a left-of-center government by agreement with the leftwing Socialists. The outcome of that maneuver could have far reaching effects upon the mixed nuclear force advocated by the United States for NATO.

With Britain also lukewarm toward the plan, the picture remains one of general confusion.

South Gains 12th Trick

By OSWALD JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

South won the first trick with the ace of spades and counted 11 easy tricks. The 12th might lie in diamonds. If not, there was always the possibility of a squeeze, so South decided to tackle the diamonds right away.

He cashed the ace, led a second diamond and stuck in the nine. East won with the jack and returned a spade. West's ten forced dummy's king. South played the king of diamonds from dummy and discarded his last spade. He had hoped to drop the queen but instead West showed out.

At this point South could have claimed the balance on a squeeze, but such showing off is not good form. Still South knew he was going to make the hand, because only West could stop spades and only East could stop diamonds.

Eventually, no one was going to be able to stop hearts.

South ran off five club tricks. On the fourth club a heart was discarded from dummy. On the fifth club West had to go down to two hearts in order to hang on to the jack of spades. The nine of spades was discarded from dummy—it had done its work, but the ten of diamonds was left to squeeze East. East had to hang on to the queen of diamonds and was also forced to go to two hearts.

Now South led a heart to dummy's king and made the last two tricks with his ace and small heart.
