WALLACE REID'S NEW PHOTOPLAY WARMLY PRAISED

If opinions of experts are worth anything, then "The Man From Funeral Range," Wallace Reid's latest Paramount starring vehicle which will be displayed at the Arcade theatre today and tomorrow, is certain to be one of his most popular photos. Mr. Reid says he is delighted with the photoplay and it gives him a characterization of which any screen player may well feel proud.

The story is a picturization by Neale Katterjohn of Ernest Wilkes' play "Broken Threads" which was produced at the Fulton theatre, New York, October 20, 1917. Mr. Katterjohn, who is noted as a critical of his own work, says he had no idea that the story would be so entertaining as it is, and that, as it stands, "there doesn't seem to be a dull moment anywhere."

Mr. Reid is seen as Harry Webb, a prospector, in this picture. Webb makes powerful enemies because he refuses to sell his mining claims so a couple of crooks. They involve him in serious trouble when he goes to the rescue of Jandes, a cabaret dancer whom he loves, who has been enticed to a room in a hotel on a forged note. A jealous woman among the men who is responsible for this and Webb is convicted of the crime, after James where testimony might have saved him, has been allowed and sentenced to prison on a trip ostensibly to prevent his from testifying in court. Webb escapes to the Funeral Range Mountains and later, when the South is revealed, he is sentenced and finds happiness in Jandes' love.

THE WAY OF THE STRONG

The "Way of the Strong" is a story of the great northwest, a story of contrasting measures, in which strong Anne is Nature's boon. The play of the production is a dual role.

This play, which will be featured at the Majestic this Monday and Tuesday, is a story of the north land, concerning the forest patrol, in the land of vast spaces, where men and women live and love and marry, where life is stripped of its pretense and shows the naked souls of men and women. In the first scenes the characters are introduced, all of them, not only who are, but why they are, so that we understand their motives and sympathize with them. Adventure, love and romance follow in quick succession.

The "Strong" is a story of the north, of the primitive, of the elemental, of the great, of the strong. It is a story of the north land, of the forest, of the great spaces, of the great mountains, of the great rivers, of the great lakes, of the great forests, of the great men and women who people the north land. The story is based on the novel of the same name by Rupert Hughes, and is directed by Elmer Clifton and is shown on the screen by the Mutual Film Corporation.

WHY I LOVE THE WAR

What a good and sufficient reason it would be if one could only say, "I love the war because it made me happy." Well, the William Fox production of "Why I Love the War" at the Theatre Lyric starting today.

The play concerns a man who has gone to pot, his daughter on the auction block of infamy to further his own interests. An excellent all-star cast is seen and in addition to a real exciting entertainment the play teaches a moral. Also A Smiling Bill Parson's comedy.

WHITMAN COLLEGE CELEBRATION

WALLA WALLA, Wn., June 9.—Over fifty universities, colleges, normal schools, commercial organizations and clubs in various parts of the United States have stated they intend to send representatives here to attend the exercises to be held June 10, in celebration of the completion of the twenty-fifth year of service of President S. L. Penrose as head of Whitman College here.

Harvard, Yale, Cornell, Columbia, Brown and Northwestern are among the eastern universities which will be represented. The western schools which have promised to send delegates are the universities of California, University of Washington, University of Idaho, University of Montana, University of Colorado, and the University of Oregon. Clark D. Bissell, a Seattle attorney who is a member of the faculty of the University of Washington will represent the Pacific institution.

Providing Camping Stations

MONTESANO, Wash., June 5.—Grays Harbor county commissioners have decided to install camping stations on the Pacific Highway for the benefit of the automobile tourist travel. The stations will have the necessary shelter buildings and concrete stoves for cooking. The first two will be built near Quinault Lake and Gray Elma. Work on these is to begin immediately.

ABERDEEN TO CELEBRATE

ABERDEEN, Wash., June 8.—Plans are underway for a third and last 4th picnic and barbecue for Aberdeen's returned service men. No definite date, or place for the celebration has been agreed upon. Lake Quinault, Lake Sylvia and Pacific Beach have been suggested.

ENGLISH AS WORLD LANGUAGE

Writer Sees Strong Indication of Its Supremacy as One Result of the Great War.

All the indications are that the universal language will be English. The formal draft of the treaty of Versailles will be printed in the traditional language of diplomacy, the language of Foch and Clemenceau, but the discussions at Paris and Versailles were in the tongue which President Wilson and most of our peacedelegates have lisped at their dictation. Perhaps it is no compliment to us that the European peacemakers should be in a position to meet us more than half way in the matter of foreign tongues, but the fact is there.

The French language will prosper after the war. In more or less perfect form it will be brought back to America, to Australia, to Canada, to South Africa by soldiers and auxiliary war workers to the number of many tens of thousands. But for every Anglo-Saxon whom the war has taught French it is a safe guess that there are a hundred mid-Europeans to whom as a result of the war, emphasizing already existing conditions, the English tongue will be brought close to home. Besides the new Czecho-Slovakia must be in intimate touch with a million Czechs and Slovaks in the United States, because there are several million Poles in this country, because every one of the new nationalities in central Europe looks in the first place to these United States, the American language will be familiar among all foreign languages to these people. For that matter, the numerous commissions and propagandas of mid-Europe which have been busy in the United States will have brought back with them the use, if not the idiom, of our language.—Exchange.

ALL FROM ONE TURKEY EGG

Here's Example of Taking Advantage of Opportunities Which Should Teach Good Lesson.

An old farmer and his son were at work in the field near the roadside when his son discovered a dead turkey, which probably was discarded by another farmer who was on his way to the market. Both were curious to learn the cause of its death. They brought the turkey to the barn, dissected the fowl's body and obtained an egg. The boy set the egg and the result was a fine turkey gobbler that was sold the next summer for $5. With this money the boy purchased a pig. The next summer the young capitalist sold his sow and eight pigs for $50. He then bought two thoroughbred heifers.

The ensuing fall he sold two milch cows and calves which he sold for $200. His final investment was in two one-year-old filly colts.

After a lapse of five years the lad was the custodian of two good mares and $1,000 in gold which he procured in the sale of their colts. And today this farmer's son is studying agriculture and animal husbandry in a state university as the result of one turkey egg.—Tariff Magazine.

Exploded Theory.

The married man concluded to try out his new theory. Addressing his spouse he said:

"My dear, I should like to go to Jones' tonight for several hours. Mr. Jones is not ill and does not require any sitting up with. If he did I should let his wife do it. Mr. Jones is perfectly well so far as I know, except for a certain itching for a poker game. He is notoriously a reckless poker player, and very likely could be relieved of several dollars in the course of the evening. There might be something to drink—he did not specify concerning that. He only said my presence would be appreciated. I am sure that when I have told you the truth about this affair you will consent to my going. Am I right?"

He was not.—Kansas City Star.

Plans for the New Industrial Democracy Is Attracting General Attention.

NEW YORK, June 9.—Sitting before a pile of letters from manufacturers all over the United States, thousands of them, asking hungrily for information of the success of the industrial democracy plan in operation in Rochester, Hall of Fame, N. Y., H. Bernard David yesterday in his office here told the advantages of the system and the difficulties of installing it in the average factory.

"There is no doubt," said Mr. David, "that the plan, which is based upon the idea of constitutional government, creates a better basis of understanding between management and worker than is possible under the old system.

"It is the means of settling every question of wages, hours, and working conditions that may arise and, through the contact, close, personal contact, between employer and employees, facilitates such settlements to a considerable degree. It tends to the elimination of obsolete methods and substantial friction, it stimulates the worker's interest in his work and, first of all, it puts the human element into the relations between employer and employee, the one thing more essential to industrial peace than all other combined.

"I have never known of an industrial subject that appealed to popular imagination as does this one. This idea will spread because every manufacturer who is alive to the times is looking for some system that will save us a situation that has rapidly been growing from bad to worse, the relation between capital and labor. But let no one think the plan is easy or that it is one-sided. It is purely a 'give and take' and a 'live and let live' idea.

"If a manufacturer goes into it expecting to make his pay immediately, or if he expects immediate returns he will be disappointed. Such an attitude would foredoom him to failure. We have discovered that it is a slow process of education for both sides—managers and workers.

"Yes, diplomacy, tact, equity and a desire to see absolute justice done are essentials. To the 'success of democracy,' to industry, Problems are constantly arising that require gentle handling, chiefly because of misunderstanding. The question of wage value has to be settled equitably, impartially. It turns fifty questions of the element that tends to possible disintegration and thus increases the spirit of safety, values so that instead of workers putting grievances they are able to the best to be remedied or removed.

"It is an expensive undertaking in one's mind, reckoned in terms of the standpoint of dollars and cents. It means that the firm adopting it is bound to pay the top wages for the industry. It means you must employ a Superintendent of Personnel and that the appointees and duties of your workers must receive as constant attention as the production of your plant. The welfare of workmen in the company's time, not money, too. The men are for Pershing are now the most contented lot I ever had.

"The mechanics of the plan are in operation. In a practical way the lines of the government in the United States and rests on three bodies chosen by the company executive, the foreman and the workers and known as the Commons, the Senate and the House of Representatives," another of Mr. David's strong tongues. If the men are a very active committee called the Committee of Judges, appointed to the House, and a Board of Appeals. The latter was formulated under a resolution which provides that complaints and matters of dispute shall be referred to the Board of Appeals, composed of the presidents and five other members of the senate and house. If the decision is unsatisfactory to either side appeal may be taken to the Cabinet which consists of the executive officers of the company.

"Prizes are offered for suggestions for the betterment of the service or beauty of the workers in the shop and from twenty to twenty-five suggestions are received weekly. Fifty per cent of them receive awards. Thus industrial democracy is utilizing the brains of the employes." Mr. David expressed the hope that, if it were conclusively proved that the plan of treatise, its adoption should be promoted by commercial or government recognition.

RECRUIT BALKS AT THE JOB

Declared He Had Only Agreed to Get Kaiser and Couldn't Take On Whole Germany.

"Are you willing to go across fight the Germans?" asked an interviewer in the mustering office in former cantonment No. 2 of a young Florida negro at Camp Dix, whose personnel record he was completing, the query being one of the formal questions put to every recruit.

"Ah don't know 'bout dat, boss" answered the colored boy. "Ah thought yur jes' wanted me to go get the kaiser. Ain a-bankerin' to fix that one that Pace, but does yuh mean yuh want me to lick da whole gang?"

The interviewer explained the situation. The young negro's home board had told him they were going to send him to Europe to "get the kaiser" and he came to camp thinking it was a single-handed job. His face brightened when he found that in his personal fight he would have the backing of several million allies.

The personnel questionnaire made out in the mustering office brings some amazing answers from the southern negroes recently brought there for training. One couldn't remember where his father was born.

"Well, was he born in the United States?" asked the interviewer. "No, indeed, sah, no indeedy!" replied the recruit. "He was born in Virginia!"

The same recruit wanted to show that he could qualify under every question. "Are you a member of any lodge or fraternity?" was a query put to him. "Good Lawd, boss, I should say I was! I am a pallbearer."

Men uniforms are being issued to these Florida recruits and they are the proudest soldiers in the camp. They have taken to the military game like ducks to water, and officers are amazed at the cleverness they are showing in learning drill orders in elementary army work.

TO DRIVE AWAY MOSQUITOES

Kansas Professor Makes Public Preparation He Claims Is Effective Against Pests.

Campers and tourists who are harassed by mosquitoes can find relief by use of repellants, points out George A. Dean, professor of entomology, Kansas State Agricultural college.

Where time and circumstances will not permit or sanitary means of control an effective repellant can be made by the use of one ounce of cedar oil, two ounces of citronella and two ounces of spirits of camphor.

A small amount of this solution applied to the face and hands or on a handkerchief tied around the neck will keep the mosquitoes away. Equally good results may be obtained if the liquid is applied to a cloth and hung near the face when mosquitoes are troublesome at night.

Reasons Why Michelin Tires Have Become So Popular

Consider the following facts about Michelin Universals, and see if you do not agree that you should use these tires. Now is the time to reach a decision—which, if properly made, will spare you much expense and annoyance during the months ahead.

1—UNEQUALLED EXPERIENCE. The organization behind Michelin distinctly the world's foremost pneumatic automobile tire, which it introduced in 1895. For 24 years Michelin has pioneered in automobile tire technology. No other tire has had this unequalled experience.

2—SUPERIOR MATERIALS. The quality of the materials used in Michelin Casings and Inner Tubes has always been the best that money can buy. This will mean fewer bruises, fewer blowouts, fewer disappointments, fewer delays, fewer expenses for the Michelin user.

3—THICKNESS. Measure the thickness of Michelin Casings and Inner Tubes and you will find that they are more uniform and thicker than those of other tires. All the extra material is of the best quality and has been carefully placed, and hence [illegible]

4—EXTRA WEIGHT. A simple comparative test will show you that Michelin Universals weigh twelve to fifteen per cent more than other tires—additional proof that Michelins are made generously, with all the extra mileage built into them. This extra wear is important.

5—BROAD FLAT TRACTION SURFACE. A broad flat tread wears slowly, more evenly than the small rubbing surface of a round. So with tires—the broad flat tread, broad and flat, lasts much longer than one with a small rounded tread. Note Michelin tread in this respect.

6—MODERATE PRICES. Despite their high quality and superior design Michelin Casings and Inner Tubes are moderate in price. The cash of the economist is really greatly conserved by using Michelin [illegible] tires which are called for other uses of equally popular [illegible]

[illegible] that Michelin has devoted 24 years and all his world-wide resources [illegible] to perfecting tires exclusively, are you not willing to test Michelins [illegible] and be convinced?
