Wants Damages For Bean Crop Destroyed When Airplanes Fall

SANTA MONICA, Cal., June 22.—Is an airplane collision in mid-air an "act of God," and if not can damages be collected for a bean crop which was damaged when the two planes fell? These are the questions that are puzzling attorneys for the Santa Monica Mountain Park Company, owners of a ten-acre tract, planted in beans, which was actually destroyed recently as the direct result of an airplane collision.

Two aviators went up over Santa Monica Canyon, near here, to perform thrilling feats for a moving picture. A passenger in one plane was scheduled to leap to the other while both were in full flight. A third airplane circled a short distance away, bearing a camera and a picture man to take pictures of the stunts. When the duchess drew close to each other they shifted and plunged to earth. When they hit the ground, they fell upon a large plant that had been planted to beans. Several thousand people who had been watching the stunt turned to see the stricken fall and, it is said, contemplated aghast at the bean crop's destruction by trampling down the vines.

Now the company owning the beans wants financial redress and they are contemplating the bean value of the accident, which, they claim, was the result of the destruction.

Thinks Service in Army In Alaska Valuable Experience to Young Man

SAN FRANCISCO, June 22.—Now that Governor B. Meriam, governor of the Territory of Alaska, says that if between 2,000 and 3,000 men in the army be would consider it a duty to apply for an assignment to an Alaska station.

"We are now recruiting a battalion of the 23d Infantry to be ready to be sent North to relieve the United States troops stationed in Alaska now," he said. "I don't know exactly how many will be put in this battalion, but probably enough to relieve the whole Alaska force.

"During that time he can be assigned wherever he will. With conditions as they are in the territory he will know right where to go to get in on the ground floor. Service in Alaska offers many advantages also. There is a 20 per cent increase in pay and a 20 per cent increase in the quarters allowance."

THE PRODUCER'S GIGANTIC TASK

All who will see Theda Bara as Cleopatra, the Egyptian Queen, in William Fox's spectacular film, will realize the tremendous difficulties of such a production. This was not a case of finding a fitting natural environment, for the characters, and the actors who should bring them to life, the story vividly alive, "not merely recorded," is attempting to carry back the imagination of the audience nineteen hundred years. William Fox rallied to his aid all the resources of his inventive genius, expenses and number in order to create the illusion that this mighty drama of historical significance unfolded.

He built temples and palaces. He studied ship construction so that the Egyptian galleys and the Roman triremes taking part in the battle of Actium looked like ancient vessels instead of the St. Lawrence skiffs. He was very careful of keeping from his picture all reminders of the twentieth century.

But even after the settings were made historically correct the most trying part of the work was still before him. Whenever an age of civilization is reproduced, the producer deals with large groups and not with individual actors. The people of importance in such films stand to the very much on the sidelines, with the throngs, gesticulating, easily swayed populace, who were the source of their power. The funeral of Julius Caesar, at which Brutus and Antony present their case to the people in the open market place, is a splendid example of this fact. We have another public scene at the banquet of Lucullus, which is not a private dinner party for a select Egyptian. Your attention is drawn to the fact that the crowd
