LA GRANDE NEWS 28 YEARS AGO

Taken from the files of the La Grande Weekly Gazette, for September 18, 1892.

Captain J. C. Henry, of Company K, stationed at La Grande, was elected major of commissioned officers of the Third regiment, when officers of this organization met Friday evening, pursuant to a call from headquarter in Condon. Major Henry served as second and later as first lieutenant in Co. H, formerly located here, and, at the organization of Co. K in April, 1891, was unanimously chosen captain.

The familiar countenance of the old time "Jo-Jo" Joe McCrary, is again seen on our steets.

At the annual election of officers of Hope Chapter No. 13, Order of Eastern Star, the following officers were elected and installed for the ensuing year: Mrs. J. E. Ellis, worthy matron; S. R. Reeves, worthy patron; Mrs. I. E. Dumphey, associate matron; Mrs. M. Quackenbush, treasurer; Mrs. J. L. Cavanna, secretary; Miss Ella Weathers, conductress; Miss Ida Slater, associate conductress; H. S. Cavanna, chaplain; Mrs. E. J. Russel, Mrs. M. Reeves, Mrs. A. Curtis, Mrs. E. DuBois, and Mrs. C Brown, five points of star; Mrs. L. M. Jones, warder; M. Reynolds, sentinel; Miss Nellie Rinehart, organist.

John Caviness' new butcher shop is completed and ready for occupancy. It is the best and most conveniently arranged shop in Eastern Oregon.

Mrs. A. N. Hamilton, accompanied by her daughters, Misses Minnie and Dolan, and Miss Grace Coffman, took their departure Monday evening for a month's visit to the Willamette Valley.

Mayor Reeves has retired from the hotel business and disposed of all of his furniture. The house, under a new name, will be operated by A. Sommer, owner of the building.

E. C. Goodnough, a former resident of La Grande, was up this week on a business trip from Portland.

Combine Forces to Fight The Onery Grasshopper

There is nothing so good as poisoned bran for taking the hop out of a grasshopper and there is no better way of buying and distributing the bran than through a community organization, specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture find. In the areas where the grasshopper comes down on the farm crop like old plagues of Egypt, there should be grasshopper-fighting organizations, just as there are fire-fighting units in every city. Fighting a grasshopper invasion without the help of one's neighbors is like trying to put out a fire in a powder factory with one bucket of water.

In the Pacific States the vast, well cultivated areas of mountains, foothills, and grasslands afford ideal breeding grounds for at least eight common species of grasshoppers. Undisturbed, the pests can mass their forces in the spring and be ready for a decent upon the alfalfa fields and cultivated crops of the farmer when weather conditions permit. There seems to be little hope of destroying the grasshoppers in these isolated breeding areas and for that reason specialists of the Bureau of Entomology, United States Department of Agriculture, maintain that it will be many years before the grasshopper menace disappears from the West. But, while the eight plagues cannot be exterminated at their source, they can be met with a systematic, well-directed barrage of poisoned bait, fire, and other weapons for control when they attempt to invade the cultivated fields.

Preparing for the Attack.

Every locality should have an organization fully equipped and prepared to meet the grasshopper onslaught. All preparations should be made early in the spring before the insects have left their breeding grounds. The organization should be directed and controlled by efficient and energetic leaders, and it ought to have the cooperation and support of every farmer in the community as well as the landowners who hold title to the remote areas from which the plague spreads.

An equitable method of raising funds for the work can be arranged if every landholder is taxed on the basis of the acreage he holds or operates. The funds should be collected and placed at the disposal of a good business man who will know how and where to go about buying poisons and other supplies when they are needed, without the necessity of unwinding red tape. Sometimes it is advantageous to fight the grasshopper army with fire, and it is often necessary to spread poisoned bait upon the property of non-resident landowners. Here are two points where legal advice is desirable, and the leaders should know their exact rights and limits in these matters before the time comes for them to act to save the crops of the community.

Eight Species in West.

There are at least eight species of grasshopper commonly found in the Pacific States. Some of these are winged, some are not; some prefer one variety of food, but altogether, when seasonal conditions are favorable, they can destroy any crop that the Western farmer grows. The habits and characteristics of each species are described in Farmer's Bulletin 1140, Grasshopper Control in the Pacific States, which may be had upon request of the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

In addition to a brief description of the pests, the bulletin gives the recipes for mixing the most efficient poisons, when to spread, and how to place the bait so as to avoid injury to livestock. Special control measures are required to meet different geographical conditions and the publication presents the methods that have proved most effective after five years of experimentation.

"A GOOD PROVIDER."

When it comes to being "a good provider," no man would pride himself on furnishing trash liberally for his family. The family is entitled to good, wholesome food that helps growth.

It is the same with reading. Good reading pleases and creates its own hunger for more good reading. The Youth's Companion is the best of reading for all—every member—every age.

And it comes every week—crowded with the best. Let us prove it with a sample.

The Youth's Companion has long since ceased to provide for "Youth" alone. It has become the favorite all-the-family weekly of America. Its name is a misnomer, but it is retained for the sentiment it has generated in American homes through its servce to every age.

Only $2.50 for a year of 52 issues. Serial stories, short stories, facts fun, games, puzzles, humor, etc.
