Solons Back WAC Recruiting Drive

SALEM, February 14 — Backing an appeal by General of the Army George C. Marshall for more women's army corps members to serve in government hospitals throughout the United States, members of the Oregon house and senate have passed a resolution calling on state governmental agencies to assist in the women's army corps recruiting campaign.

Under the new program special platoons of Oregon women will be enlisted for the women's army corps to serve with the army medical department, working side by side with army doctors and nurses in the care of war wounded. Those enlisted as medical department WACs will have the opportunity to select one of nine general hospitals in seven western states for duty after completion of their basic training, it was announced at Oregon women's army corps recruiting headquarters, 614 S. W. 11th avenue in Portland.

Enlistees for the special platoons from each Oregon city will receive their basic training at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., and many will be eligible to attend medical or surgical technician school before assignment to an army hospital.

Time Required to Secure Gas for Return Home

An influx of persons making last-minute applications at local OPA boards for gasoline to return to their homes in other states brought a warning Saturday from Frederic P. Janney, district OPA rationing executive, that it takes about a week for the boards to issue gasoline for this purpose.

Persons who must leave their jobs in Oregon and who therefore seek gasoline for a permanent change of residence, were advised by Janney to plan their affairs so that local boards would have plenty of time to receive and act on their applications for gasoline in due course of business, and not to expect immediate action which is a hardship and imposition on the boards and not possible with the current heavy work load these volunteers are carrying.
