The Exiles Soliloquy.

A stranger and alone
Torn from my land of birth,
Far from my early home,
I wander o'er earth.
But there's no spot so fair—
As there where er'st I breathed
My own soft mountain air,
Amid the gentle breeze.

Where in my childish hours
Beneath the summer day,
Sporting through break and bower,
The moments sped away.
The flowers a brighter hue
Wore on each sunny morn,
Sparkling in the early dew,
Along the velvet lawn.

The birds in sweeter strain
Warbled amid the grove,
And make each hill and plain
The tiny songs I love.
Pass on before mine eyes
Ye joyous scenes of yore,
Within this heart ye lie,
But can return no more.

Fond memory, that would bring
Thy harp neglected long,
And saddening numbers sing
Of blighted hopes now gone,
Depart, thou sacred shade,
Back, to thy silent home;
Each note a wound hath made,
Would break a heart of stone.

JULIET.

Columbia, Tenn.

Death of Judge Whittlesey.

The telegraph announces the death of Hon. Frederick Whittlesey, which took place at Rochester, yesterday afternoon, at about half past 2 P. M. His disease was typhus fever. Judge Whittlesey served in Congress as Representative from the Monroe District of this State for two successive terms, from 1831 to 1835. In that capacity he was distinguished for an assiduous attention to his duties, great knowledge of practical affairs, and uncompromising independence of opinion. After leaving Congress, he resumed the practice of the legal profession in Rochester, which he continued until 1838, soon after the accession of Gov. Seward to the Chair of State, by whom he was appointed Vice Chancellor of the Eighth District, an office then of great importance and responsibility. He found the affairs of the office in a state of perplexing arrears, but by dint of his uncommon energy of character and orderly habits of business, he succeeded in reducing them to shape, and promptly diminishing the calendar. Upon the agitation of the question respecting the reform of the Constitution in this State, he took a decided stand in favor of that measure, and exerted no small influence in securing its adoption. He was from the first an efficient and zealous advocate of law-reform and of abolishing the distinction between legal and chancery practice, defending the legislation, which has resulted in the establishment of a comparatively rational and simple code. After the adoption of the new Constitution by the people of N. Y., Mr. Whittlesey received the first nomination by the Whig Convention in Syracuse, in 1847, as one of the Eighth Judges of the Court of Appeals, to be elected under the provisions of the Constitution. On the 7th of June following, the election took place. He failed of an election on that occasion, though he had more votes than any other Whig candidate.— His age at the time of his death was about sixty. His loss will be deeply felt, not only in the western part of the State, where he had resided for many years, but throughout the community, which had learned to value his solid excellence of character, and his devotion to the highest interests of the public. His lamented decease leaves a second vacancy in the Court of Appeals of which he was a Judge.— N. Y. Tribune.

A MOTHER'S TASK.—It is said a certain celebrated artist had already spent two whole years in painting a scene; but being dissatisfied, destroyed the labor of so many months, and was making another attempt, when a friend interrogated him as to the cause of his thus spending so much of his time. His reply was:

"I paint for immortality!"

Every individual now living, is doing work for eternity; but a mother, to whom is committed the training of a mortal immortal, is emphatically painting for immortality.

Here is the hand that is delineating features on a canvass which will retain its characters "far into the other world." It is this consideration that gives its momentous importance to that question, so often asked with such solicitude by the anxious mother, "what influences amongst those I can bring to bear upon my child, will be the most lasting and productive of the greatest good."

A LADY LUMBER MERCHANT. — Miss Mary Legare, sister of the late Hugh S. Legare, of South Carolina, formerly Attorney General of the United States, is engaged in the lumber trade at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and advertises to supply any amount of building lumber, boat plank, &c.

SOMETHING FOR TYPOS.—"* of my existence, give me an ‸," said a printer to his sweet-heart. She immediately made a — at him, and placed her ☞ between his ||'s. "Such an outrage," said Faust, looking †† at her, "is without a ¶."

☞ Foul Mouthed—Having an appetite for a chicken.

A DEMOCRATIC BARBACUE.—A correspondent of the Boston Post gives the following account of a Southern barbacue:

Most of your readers have heard of a barbacue, but probably few have ever attended one. Perhaps a description of a public barbacue, given in November last by the citizens of Athens, Georgia, to the Hon. Howell Cobb, speaker of the United States House of Representatives, may not be uninteresting. The barbacue comprised speeches by the Hon. Howell Cobb and Senator Dawson, and afterwards a dinner. Of the speeches, I shall only say that they were eloquent appeals in defence of the Union. My particular object is to describe the dinner. I took occasion, while Senator Dawson was speaking, to go out and see how the dinner was cooked. The tables were laid upon a green lawn, about one hundred yards from the College Chapel, where the Hon. gentleman was speaking, and the cooking was done in the open air near the tables. A trench was dug about 120 feet long, 5 feet wide, and 1½ feet deep. Alongside of the trench, piles of wood were burning, and the coals were thrown into the trench—40 hogs and fifteen sheep were spitted and roasting. The ends of the spits were resting on each side of the trench; the fat dropping from the hogs and sheep kept the coals alive, and assisted in roasting the meat. As this was altogether a new way of roasting to me, I determined to remain until the hogs and sheep were done. In process of time they were done, and one by one they were taken off the spits. Then commenced the cutting up of the animals. Three dirty negroes, and three dirtier white men, stood by, and as the animals were taken from the fire they laid them upon a table, and with a broad axe cut them in pieces, and then tore them into fragments with their hands. As there were neither towels nor water near them, the cooks made their mouths answer the double purpose of towels and water. When the animals were torn into sufficient small pieces to suit the tastes of the party, they were placed upon wooden dishes and put upon a long pine table, having the same cover upon it that it had when the carpenter left it. The entire bill of fare consisted of hogs, sheep, and bread. About 400 men partook of the dinner, each man laying hold of a piece of hog with one hand and a piece of bread with the other. There was nothing to drink, not even water. As I had seen the cutting up process, of course I did not eat any of the dinner, but I could not help thinking that it was rather a brutal way of serving a retiring speaker of the U. States House of Representatives. E. L. F.

TREASON.—Several of the New York papers, in noticing that the abolition rioters at Christiana, Pa., have been indicted for treason, in accordance with the law, as laid down by the Judge, in his charge to the grand jury, take ground for meting out the same fate to the more recent Syracuse law resisters. The Mirror says:

"We trust that the authors of the late disgraceful riot at Syracuse, where the law was similarly violated by an armed mob, will be treated in the same way. If the act was treason, in Philadelphia, it equally so in New York, and Gov. Hunt owes it to himself, to the people, and to the laws, to use every means to bring the offenders to justice."

The Journal of Commerce also asks why should not the Syracuse rioters be indicted also for treason, and says:

"Some of them were armed, and many of them resisted by violence, and finally overpowered the officers of government. This constitutes treason, according to the definition given by Judge Grier, in his charge to the grand jury.

NEVER ASK QUESTIONS IN A HURRY.— "Tom a word with you."

"Be quick, then; I'm in a hurry."

"What did you give you sick horse, t'other day?"

"A pint of turpentine."

John hurries home, and administers the same dose to his favorite charger, who, strange to say, drops off defunct in half an hour. His opinion of his friend Tom's veterinary is somewhat staggered. He meets him the next day.

"Well, Tom."

"Well, John, what is it."

"I gave my horse a pint of turnpentine and it killed him dead as Julius Cæsar."

"So it did mine."

SERIOUS AFFRAY.—A terrible affray occurred in the court-house at Tuscaloosa Ala., on the 20th ult., in which John Kirby, an old and respected citizen, was shot with his own pistol by Frederick P. Hall, whith whom he had a law suit. Mr. Kirby died almost instantly. One of the bystanders was shot in the leg, and a juryman was also slightly injured. Hall immediately surrendered himself.

GOV. MARCY.—A new candidate for the Presidential Chair appears in Gov. Marcy, who has been named for that office by some of the New York politicians, on the ground that his political creed is not only sound, but that his services as Secretary of War, under Mr. Polk, will bear the test of public examination.

APPROPRIATE.—A Cincinnati editor suggests that of a hog as the device to be sculptured on that city's contribution to the Washington Monument. The aptness of the whale on the New Bedford block has impressed him favorably.

☞ Punch asserts that after all "Britannia rules the waves," for in the recent yacht races the American clipper ran away from the British fleet!

☞ Gerrit Smith declines the nomination for President by the Liberty party.

THIS Institution is situated in the town of Forest Grove, Tualatin Plains. It is now in its infancy, yet parents and guardians desiring to send to this school, may be assured not only of the healthiness and beauty of the location, the intelligence and morality of the inhabitants, but especially that such teachers will be employed as will make the highest mental and moral improvement of the scholars, their chief object.

A spacious and noble Academy building has been erected upon a site, commanding the view of two extensive prairies, with their intervening and encircling forests, and when completed, it will furnish ample accommodations for both departments of the school.

Forest Grove is about equidistant from the towns of St. Helens, Milton, Portland, Milwaukie, Oregon City, and Lafayette.

To Immigrants and others.

THE undersigned, proprietors of the Town of MILTON, being desirous to have improvements progress rapidly, propose that they will give to every head of a family two town lots, and to every single man one town lot, who will become an actual settler in said town within six months, and build a house upon the same; in addition to which, we will sell building materials to those that accept this proposition, and allow them a reasonable length of time to pay for them in.

To any one that will build a good Grist Mill, calculated to do the business of the place, we will give a mill site, together with land sufficient for the purposes of a grist mill.

This town is handsomely located upon the lower branch of the Willamette river, just far enough above its junction with the Columbia to render it an excellent harbor, and has the advantage of being accessible from all sides, either by land or water; it is also the lowest point upon the river that has a wagon road leading from it to the Willamette valley.

Two mountain streams run, one on each side of the town, allowing water power sufficient to manufacture 50,000 feet of lumber per day; upon one of which three saw mills are now underweigh.

Although this town has been laid out but a few months, it has already made much progress in point of improvement and commerce, and bids fair, soon, to become the most important one in the territory.

To those desirous of taking up land claims, we would state that we are surrounded by as beautiful and fertile a section of country as Oregon can boast of, including the Scappoose plains, Sauvies Island, the rich and extensive Prairies lately explored upon the Callapooya or Lewis river, and the fine land in the immediate vicinity of the town.
