NOT CHANGED, BUT GLORIFIED.

BY F. E. H.

"The twilight shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible."

Not changed, but glorified! Oh, beauteous language
 For those who weep,
Mourning the loss of some dear face departed,
 Fallen asleep.

Hushed into silence, never more to comfort
 The hearts of men;
Gone, like the sunshine of another country,
 Beyond our ken.

Oh, dearest dead, we saw thy white soul shining
 Behind the face,
Bright with the beauty and celestial glory
 Of an immortal grace.

What wonder that we stumble, faint with weeping,
 And sick with fears,
Since thou hast left us, all alone with sorrow,
 And blind with tears?

Can it be possible no words shall welcome
 Our coming feet?
How will it look, that face that we have cherished,
 When next we meet?

Will it be changed, so glorified and saintly,
 That we shall know it not?
Will there be nothing that shall say, "I love thee,
 And I have not forgot?"

Oh, faithless heart, the same loved face transfigured
 Shall meet thee there,
Less sad, less wistful, in immortal beauty
 Divinely fair.

The mortal veil washed pure with many weepings,
 Is rent away,
And the great soul that sat within its prison
 Hath found the day.

In the clear morning of that other country,
 In Paradise,
With the same face that we have loved and cherished,
 She shall arise!

Let us be patient, we who mourn, with weeping,
 Some vanished face.
The Lord has taken, but to add more beauty
 And a diviner grace.

And we shall find once more, beyond earth's sorrows,
 Beyond these skies,
In the fair city of the "sure foundations,"
 Those heavenly eyes;

With the same welcome shining through their sweetness
 That met us here;
Eyes, from whose beauty God has banished weeping,
 And wiped away the tear.

Think of us, dearest one, while o'er life's waters
 We seek the land,
Missing thy voice, thy touch, and the true helping of thy pure hand;

Till, through the storm and tempest, safely anchored
 Just on the other side,
We find thy dear face looking through death's shadows,
 Not changed, but glorified.

Exit Kalakaua.

THE MONARCH OF THE ISLES SAILS AWAY IN A GALLANT SHIP.

His Majesty Kalakaua I. completed his visit of over two months' duration, and quitted these hospitable shores at about noon yesterday, going aboard the flag-ship "Pensacola" for conveyance to his Kingdom of Hawaii, attended by Governors Kapener and Dominis, and Mr. Pierce, the United States Minister in the Hawaiian Court. Although royal visits are not usually conducted on the same principle, the chief end of a monarch abroad being to display the wealth and magnificence of his estate, and to impart a due appreciation of the importance of his realm, the travels of Kalakaua have been prosecuted on a most economical basis, as far as his individual purse or the public exchequer of Hawaii was concerned. An American war-ship conveyed him hither and bore him hence, with all the pomp and circumstance befitting the dignity of a King; and during his stay in the country, lavish hospitality and princely entertainment attended him at every turn. The aggregate bill of expenses, charged to the Hawaiian account, would probably have put the monarch on a retrenchment scale for a few years to come, if not necessitated an inflation of the Hawaiian currency. But, as it was, the expense was a mere bagatelle, and not to be mentioned as an offset to the honor of a social call from a genuine King, and the only one who ever trod the democratic turf of the Republic. Withal, Dave Kalakaua, as he was familiarly known before his accession to the kingly estate, was a jolly, good fellow, and knew how to appreciate the honors bestowed upon him like a sensible king.

During the forenoon yesterday His Majesty was visited in his quarters at the Grand Hotel by Mayor Otis and other prominent citizens, and also a deputation of Hawaiians residents in the city. The King, in taking leave of his friends, often repeated the great gratification his visit had afforded, and expressed the gratitude he should always entertain for the American people.

The royal party left the hotel in carriages, under escort of Consul Severance, at 11 A. M., and proceeded to the Pacific Mail Company's wharf. From thence they embarked on the steamer "McPherson," and put off for the frigate, which was lying at anchor in the bay. The "Pensacola" was gorgeous with a display of bunting, surmounted by the royal standard of Hawaii, floating from the mainmast head. As the royal party approached, the yards were manned, and after His Majesty had reached the deck, his safe embarkation was announced with the usual salute.—S. F. Call, Feb. 6th.

The Perambulator.

Do not be without one. Nothing is better for the baby or its mother than a walk out in the fresh, pure air and merry sunshine. But there is something much better for the mother, when for a few brief moments she gets release from the many cares and duties ever existing inside the threshold of home, than carrying in her arms a great, bouncing baby that wants to be twisting about this way and that, to stare in wonder at every object they pass, getting the wind in its face and the wrappings off its feet. And that something is the trundling of the perambulator. We do not believe in unnecessary household expenses, neither do we think that unnecessary waste of strength is ever profitable when the final result is proven. Therefore, we would advise every mother who has a baby to carry about to get a little carriage for the purpose. If your husbands tell you their mothers carried them without carriages until they were able to walk, and they think you may do the same thing with your children, remind them this is an age of improvement. Tell them you want to enjoy better health and raise stronger and more perfect children than their mothers and your mothers have done; and for this reason you should be provided with every labor-saving, health-promoting piece of machinery that your circumstances will in any wise justify. Do without some other things that can better be dispensed with, but as baby must be cared for, let it be in the right way. Let mothers take proper care of themselves, and the babies will not need half the attention that they otherwise claim.

If the scandal trial lasts twelve weeks, it is estimated that the total expense to all concerned will be at least $300,000.

Tweed in Retirement.

Harper's Weekly tells how the enforced retirement of the Tammany statesman is made comfortable: From being treated as a man convicted of enormous crimes, Tweed has been allowed to assume the character of a distinguished guest on the island. He occupies a large room in the second story of the central building of the penitentiary. This apartment, situated near the head of the stairs leading from the main entrance, is twenty feet long, twelve feet wide and twelve feet in height. It contains a double bed, screened by a sliding curtain, and is furnished with a bureau, wash stand, two writing desks, one of which is for the accommodation of his private secretary, chairs, etc. The bureau is supplied with all the necessary articles of toilet. To spare the "statesman's" eyes, the white-washed wall is covered to the height of several feet with maroon-colored muslin. The floor is partially carpeted. The visitor who undertakes to ascend the stairs leading to this room is told that there is nothing there but the private quarters of the officers, and his attention is politely directed elsewhere.

The warden's house, situated about a mile north of the penitentiary, is reached by a pleasant, shaded walk, which, in fine weather, forms the favorite promenade of the retired "statesman," sometimes alone, sometimes accompanied by his private secretary. The screen of trees spares him the gaze of curious visitors, and affords opportunities for a dignified retreat should an outsider chance to come too near. As he has been permitted to let his hair, mustache and beard grow, and to wear the ordinary dress of a gentleman, he might encounter a visitor without being recognized. In the north wing of the warden's house is the large dining room where the old "Ten Governors" used to entertain their friends. This is now used by the retired statesman, who takes his meals there in privacy. It is not to be supposed that the table is furnished with the regulation prison fare. That would be too coarse for a man accustomed to Mr. Tweed's former style of living.

Postal Cards.

When it was first proposed that postal cards should be issued by the Government, objection was made that the cards might be used for mischievous purposes, and to provide against any abuse of the system the law took care to prescribe severe punishment by fine and imprisonment for any one convicted of sending scurrilous postal cards through the mails. The use of the cards has shown them to be a great convenience to the public, and thus far there have been comparatively few complaints of any abuses committed through their instrumentality. The first case, so far as we are aware, in which any one has been prosecuted for sending scurrilous postal cards through the mails, was recently terminated in New York, by the sentence of Moses Chamberlain to pay a fine of $5,000. He was tried early in December, but a variety of circumstances served to delay the trial, and to prevent the completion of the court record. The theory of the Government, which was the prosecuter in the case, was that Mr. Chamberlain had sent the scurrilous cards to Mr. Van Valkenburg, for the purpose of extorting money from him. The evidence was almost wholly circumstantial, and consisted chiefly of the testimony of experts as to identity of handwriting. A part of the evidence served to show that words mis-spelled on the postal card were mis-spelled in the same way by the defendant in letters he was shown to have written. Chamberlain was convicted December 24th, but a motion for a new trial was made and argued. On January 12th the motion was denied, and on the following day Chamberlain was sentenced. There were separate counts relating to fourteen distinct postal cards sent by the defendant through the mails, so that the sentence of the Court (a fine of $5,000) was comparatively light. The penalty which it was in the power of the Court to inflict was a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $5,000, or imprisonment of not less than one year nor more than ten, on each count of the indictment.

CUT THIS OUT.—Every person should know how to treat a flesh wound. Every one is liable to be placed under circumstances away from surgical and veterinary aid, where he may have to save his own life, the life of a friend or beast, simply from the exercise of a little common sense. In the first place, close the lips of the wound within the hands and hold them firmly together to check the flow of the blood until several stitches can be taken and a bandage applied. Then bathe the wound for a long time in cold water. "Should it be painful," a correspondent says, "take a panful of burning coal, and sprinkle upon them common brown sugar, and hold the wound part in the smoke. In a minute or two the pain will be allayed, and the recovery proceeds rapidly. In my case a rusty nail had made a bad wound in my foot. The pain and nervous irritation were severe. This was all removed by holding it in smoke fifteen minutes, and I was able to resume my reading in comfort. We have often recommended it to others with like result. Last week one of my men had a finger nail torn out by a pair of ice tongs. It became very painful, as was to be expected. Held in sugar smoke twenty minutes, pain ceased and promised speedy recovery."

A quarter-inch rod of the best steel will sustain 9,000 pounds before breaking; soft steel, 3,000 pounds; iron wire, 9,000; iron, 4,000; inferior bar iron, 2,000; cast iron, 1,000 to 3,000; copper wire, 3,000; silver, 2,000; gold, 2,500; tin, 3,000; cast zinc, 160; cast lead, 50; milled lead, 200. Of wood, box and locust the same size will hold 1,200 pounds; toughest ash, 1,000; elm, 800; beech, cedar, white oak, pitch pine, 500; chestnut and maple, 650; poplar, 400. Wood which will bear a weight for a minute or two will break with two-thirds of the force acting a long time. A rod of iron is about ten times as strong as a hemp cord. A rope an inch in diameter will bear about two and a half tons; but in practice it is not safe to subject it to a strain of more than about a ton. Half an inch in diameter, the strength will be one quarter as much; a quarter of an inch, one-sixteenth as much, and so on.

WORKED TOO HARD.—If woman could be free from hard labor until she reaches the age of twenty, mankind would be the gainer. This is a physiological matter, and the result of our investigation of facts in this connection, and our careful consideration of the subject, leads us to express the hope that, if no other subject connected with the labor question is thought worthy of legislation, this may be selected for legislative study and action. No argument is necessary to convince people of the importance of giving the years under sixteen in a girl's life to the growth and development of her organization, on the healthy condition of which so much depends—her own health and usefulness, not only to herself, but to those dependent on her.

An Iowa Bachelor advocates the putting up of a notice over a post office window: "Flirtation limited to three minutes."

"Unquestionably the Best Sustained Work of the Kind in the World."

Harper's Magazine.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

The ever-increasing circulation of this excellent monthly proves its continued adaptation to popular desires and needs. Indeed, when we think into how many homes it penetrates every month, we must consider it as one of the educators as well as entertainers of the public mind, for its vast popularity has been won by no appeal to stupid prejudices or depraved tastes.—[Boston Globe.

The character which this Magazine possesses for variety, enterprise, artistic wealth, and literary culture that has kept pace with, if it has not led the times, should cause its conductors to regard it with justifiable complacency. It also entitles them to a great claim upon the public gratitude. The Magazine has done good and not evil all the days of its life.—[Brooklyn Eagle.

Soldiers can depend on fair dealing. Information given free of charge. When writing, enclose stamp for reply, and state company and regiment and whether you have a discharge. Congress has extended the time for filing claims for additional bounty under the Act of July 28, 1866, to January, 1875, so that all such claims must be made before that time.
